Grey Goose L'Orange Cosmopolitan

3 oz. Grey Goose® L'Orange
1/2 oz. Grand Marnier®/Cointreau®
Splash of cranberry juice
A squeeze of fresh lime
Garnish with lime peel

To make the best
Cosmopolitan in the world,
start with Grey Goose L'Orange.

In a blind taste test, the Beverage Testing Institute of Chicago sampled seven Cosmopolitans, each made with a recipe of Cointreau®, cranberry juice, and the leading premium and ultra-premium vodkas. After careful consideration, all judges chose the Cosmopolitan made with Grey Goose L'Orange, the best tasting vodka in the world with a whisper of orange. Imported from France, L'Orange is a blend of choice grains and naturally filtered mineral water infused with the sweetness of succulent oranges.

Rank	Vodka Cosmopolitans
1st	Grey Goose® L'Orange "Aromatic citrus nose. Lush, smooth mouth-feel. Robust, natural orange flavors... Long evolving finish. Very refreshing and highly drinkable."
2nd	Grey Goose Vodka
3rd	Belvedere
4th	Ketel One
5th	Stolichnaya Gold
6th	Absolut
7th	Absolut Mandrin

"Thanks LUXMAC®"

For 2 Great Mortgages!

"Thanks for the invaluable advice on liability management. Your team showed us how to substantially reduce the cost of carrying our two homes. We spent years managing the asset side of our financial plan, but overlooked the value inherent in effective liability management. You've reduced our loan carrying costs by over $6,000.00 per month and showed us the most cost effective way of purchasing the home of our dreams here in South Hampton.

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Huge Eel Sighted

Lights Flicker At Plum Island's Animal Disease Center

By Dan Rattiner

Late last Tuesday night, some passengers aboard Orient Point's Cross Sound Ferry say they saw what appeared to be a giant 40-foot long eel swimming through Long Island Sound just as they passed Plum Island.

"It was around ten o'clock at night," said Adrian Block, who was making the crossing from New London to Orient aboard the Long John. "It was a dark and stormy night," he said. "You could see the lights of Plum Island off the port side there. That's just five miles before you arrive at Orient Point. Then this really weird thing happened. The lights on the island flickered on and off, then they went on real bright, then the whole island shimmered and glowed for a few seconds. Then it went dark. Then the regular lights on the island came on again."

"Ten minutes later we saw the eel," said

Block's wife Agnes. "It was swimming alongside the ferry just under the surface of the water. And it was glowing pink. Then it swam off."

According to the Ferry office, there were no

Amagansett. In 1901, the U.S. War Department acquired the entire island, which has been operated as the Plum Island Animal Disease Center since 1952. Barbed wire fences dot the shore. Administration buildings, laboratories and animal cages are to be seen within. Here, animals are tested and experimented on with medicines to come up with cures for infectious foreign animal diseases, such as foot-and-mouth disease.

Three years ago, a proposal was made by the USDA to upgrade the facility from Level 3 to Level 4 so that experiments could be conducted to help in the control not only of animal diseases but chemical and biological diseases and agents that could affect humans. After some debate, and after much protest about this being too close to a populated area for this kind of thing, the upgrade was denied, though the lab is apparently free to apply other reports of a giant eel that night, or any other night. They also denied getting a call from the Blocks, who said they had told one of the seamen aboard the ferry about it.

Plum Island is an 840-acre island that sits east of Orient and twenty miles due north of

THINGS WE SHARE

Our Community. Our Commitment. Our Historic Lands.

For ten thousand years, the Shinnecocks have lived on these lands. Year after year, our community changes, bringing us neighbors of many colors and cultures.

Throughout time the Shinnecock Nation has been committed to preserving our ancestral homeland and its natural environment. As our lands were taken we adapted our economy and our way of life. Still, we continued to preserve and protect our remaining lands while we struggled to become self-reliant.

The Shinnecocks now come to an important moment in our history. We are exploring the development of new economic opportunities that will bring true self-reliance to our nation for generations to come. These opportunities include an Indian gaming establishment built to preserve open space while benefiting the larger Hamptons community. Year-round jobs would be created for local residents. Income would fund local community programs. Property taxes for our neighbors could be reduced. And in keeping with our heritage the building would be at one with its environment and tastefully designed, totally unlike urban casinos.

THOUGHTS TO SHARE

The Shinnecock Nation has the right under the law to use our tribal lands as we see fit. However, we pride ourselves as good neighbors. It's been that way for over 400 years, and as always, we are sensitive to our neighbors and committed to doing what is best for our historic lands.

As we explore options to improve our quality of life, we invite your comments, your questions and your support.

Log on. Let's share our thoughts.

again.

In recent months, maintenance workers on the island went on strike. Demanding increased benefits and higher pay for the dangerous work they do, they picketed along Route 25 at the dock at Orient Point where employees embark aboard government boats for the ten-minute trip out to the facility.

Many employees live on the North and South Forks.

On Monday, the day before the appearance of the giant eel, a press conference was held by our new Congressman Tim Bishop, at which time it was announced that he had received a pledge from the director of the lab and the assistant director of the lab that no new request would be made to go to Level 4 anytime in the near future.

One of the striking employees has told this newspaper that on the morning before the press conference, several small one-foot long eels, live, were transported on the ferry out to the island in big bottles, but we have not been able to get any confirmation of this.

Though the description of the 40-foot long glowing pink eel seems to match the description of a 35-foot giant Ecuadorian eel that harassed local residents this past winter from a pond in Noyac, environmentalists say that this giant eel could not be that one because giant Ecuadorians never go this far north in the summertime. Also, this one is five feet longer.

Clerical workers and management executives, who are taking up the slack on the island during the strike, say that there has been no disruption of the services being performed on the island either this past week or any time before that. They think the Blocks, for their own reasons, are perpetrating a hoax.

Rain, Hurricanes, Gypsy Moth, The Red Tide And Snakes

By Dan Rattiner

For people who like to worry, here's some icky stuff, mostly involving nature, for you to think about this summer in the Hamptons.

There should be a very wild and dramatic hurricane season on the East End in August and September. The weather pattern called El Nino, which is off San Diego, is dying, and with it go warmer waters in the Pacific Ocean and, ultimately, in the Atlantic Ocean. This had caused a decrease in the frequency of hurricane formation. The frisky new weather pattern out there, El Nina, causes cooler ocean water and is now in its ascendancy. And so the National Weather Service in Atlanta, which follows these things and predicts what the hurricane season will be like every spring, says they are expecting an astonishing eight hurricanes to form in the Atlantic this year. About half make landfall. The eastern end of Long Island, of course, sticking out into the Atlantic as it does, is a prime target for these storms.

Of course, three years ago, there was a prediction that there would be two hurricanes, and the attendant flooding would turn the peninsula of Montauk into an island for one to two weeks. It never happened.

Because the traditional start of the hurricane season here is not until August, there is still the government says to do about a hurricane. Don't tape windows. It makes them shatter into bigger pieces. Do not open windows a crack to equalize the pressure as it has been found to increase the possibility the roof will be torn off.

You can also be comforted by the fact that this year, for the first time, hurricanes are being viewed as a terrorist threat. The Coast Guard is now part of the Office of Homeland Security. A hurricane will compromise the Air Force and the Navy. What to do? Send an armoured division down to the beaches to fire at it? What? We'll just have to wait and see.

Anyway, the names of the first eleven of this year's hurricanes are (the envelope please), in order: Andres, Blanca, Carlos, Dolores, Enrique, Felicia, Guillermo, Hilda, Ignacio, Jimena and Kevin.

Of a more immediate concern is the incredible amount of rain we have had. It rained 18 days

There are no poisonous snakes in the Hamptons. There are no lions or cougars either. I've never seen an elephant here. Except once...

---

plenty of time to do the usual, which is to batten down the hatches, buy water, batteries, candles and a generator. Or maybe to rent something inland.

On the other hand, there are changes in what

Trouble

during May and nine of the first fifteen days of June. Roads were flooded. Many plants and flowers died. Also, the average temperature during this period was five degrees below normal. What is going on? Who is responsible? And will it continue?

The answer to this last question is maybe yes and maybe no. The spring and summer weather on the East End is really controlled by three weather systems — a low pressure system that sits over Iceland, a high pressure system that sits over the Azores, and cold air that tries to drive down from Manitoba in Canada toward Baltimore. Usually, there is a considerable temperature difference between these systems, and the difference sets up a sort of fight causing cold and warm, sunshine and rain, and calm and windy in interesting combinations.

This spring the three systems have been almost identical in temperature and strength. The result is that the Gulf Stream — a warm wind system that usually comes up the East Coast from Florida, passes the Northeast coast and hits western Ireland way up in the north of Europe — (Ireland is at the latitude of Montreal, as you probably know. But they have palm trees on the west coast of Ireland because of the Gulf Stream).

Anyway, the Gulf Stream this year has, because of Manitoba, Iceland and the Azores being in a kind of harmony with one another, been thrown way off course, heading due east across the Atlantic from South Carolina to reach Europe, not in Ireland, but in southern Spain. (Meteorologists are fascinated by this stuff.)

And so it's been cold here. Though it's been warm in Spain.

Will this weather system continue like this?

"A butterfly flaps its wings in China and there's a Tornado in Oklahoma two weeks later," said Ray Schmitt, a physical oceanographer at Woods Hole, Massachusetts. "That's an old joke. In other words, anything is possible."

"Long term, there is an equal chance for above normal, below normal and normal temperatures," said Mike Halpert of the National Atmospheric and Oceanic Administration in Washington. A big help he was.

* * *

Next we present the electricity report.

It had been hoped that an underwater electrical power cable connecting Bridgeport, Connecticut, with Shoreham, Long Island, would be in place and operational by now. Had it been in place, which it is not, extra electric power for hot days on Long Island would have been able to be sent from Niagara Falls, the Adirondacks and Quebec, averting any crisis.

The reason the cable is not operational is not because it is not in place — it is in place — but because legal hassles in Connecticut have held up the activation of it. It is also noteworthy that Frank Poirot, who is the spokesman for Connecticut Light & Power, has said the cost of electricity in his state will be going up this summer because of "congestion charges" from the upstate and Canadian power plants and he thinks the people of Connecticut ought to know about this.

Here on Long Island without the cable, there will be no increase in the electrical charges, but there could be brownouts and even blackouts. Last year, according to Richard Kessel, the director of the Long Island Power Authority, on one very hot day in July they came within a whisker of not having enough power to handle the demand. (Total capacity is 5,400 mw. That day the demand got to 5,059 mw).

Without the underwater cable this summer — and they are just the pulling of a switch away from activating it — the problem could really be of crisis proportions because the amount of people on the island, the number of air conditioners and the total electrical needs in general are even greater than last year, and so what LIPA has done, at a cost of $17 million, is to bring in two portable power plants on trailers and set them up in Shoreham and in Holtsville where they are currently sitting, turned off but ready to go. So it should be all right.

Maybe.

If it isn't, Kessel says he will have his people put out the word that citizens should turn their air conditioners down or even off for the afternoon. We shall see.

* * *

Here's some good news. The danger of being bitten by a shark while swimming in the ocean has been considerably reduced from what it was in these parts. There are two reasons for this. One is that there have been a spate of attacks in Florida, as I am sure you know, probably because of the El Nino effect as explained earlier in this

In Praise Of A Book About The Worst Explosion In History

By Dan Rattiner

The twenty-first century is a busy time. We have cell phones, car trips to the beach, appointments, meetings, faxes, secretaries, conventions, plane trips, tennis matches. Something I really, really like, in the middle of all of this, is to open a book and just sit there and read it. I find the place where I left off, and I proceed. The world around me recedes for awhile and I drift off into whatever world the author has in mind. I stay there. The sense of that world washes over me.

Recently, I started reading the book Krakatoa, by Simon Winchester. This is about a volcano by that name that rumbled for a few years back in the 1880s and then exploded into one of the largest natural disasters ever. Skies filled with ash all around the planet, darkened ominously, leaving a ghastly glow around the sun that lasted months. As for the island upon which this mountain sat, it simply disintegrated. Huge tidal waves were thus formed that rolled across the Pacific Ocean — for that is where this volcano had been — and crashed through coastal towns and cities everywhere. About 30,000 people died. Today, nothing remains of Krakatoa.

When I first learned of the existence of this book, I thought — wow — why didn't I think of writing this? It is a natural best seller. Well, I didn't. But Simon Winchester did.

and scientifically accurate. It is one of the best books ever written about the history and significance of a natural disaster."

And so I went out and bought the book. Hardcover. Great artwork — line drawings of the volcano, many of them by mariners who remembered what it had looked like. And so I began.

I am a naturally slow reader. I don't mind. I read one page in one minute. That's it. And so a 400-page hardcover book would take me almost seven straight hours if I were to read it nonstop, which I don't. I'm a busy guy. I get five minutes here and five minutes there. I am in a meeting and I think warm fuzzy thoughts about this book and where I am in it. It is 1682 in Chapter Two and the Dutch have built a fort at the mouth of a river thirty miles south of the volcanic island. They are traders, colonists, invaders. The local chiefs fall into line. Cloves are a big export item from this walled town, which they call

And he is a tremendous writer.

Here is what Richard Ellis of The New York Times Book Review said about Krakatoa.

Batavia.

It is two hundred years before Krakatoa is going to explode and I know just what it was like to live in this walled city — the courtesans, the Dutch aristocracy, the sailors, the merchants. I am there. And when I go home and night falls, I read a few more pages, sitting in my easy chair. Outside there is the sound of crickets. There is a chill. I have built a warm, crackling fire.

I have talked my significant other into reading this book. It is a terrific book, I tell her. And she promises me that she will get to it.

And then one day, she is off to Boston in her station wagon to visit her son, who goes to school in that town, and that night I talk to her at the hotel where she is staying.

"It took me three hours to get here," she says. "There was a tie up on I95 outside of Providence. But I was listening to Krakatoa."

"You have a TAPE of Krakatoa?" I ask her.

"Yup. I've listened to it all the way up. It is absolutely wonderful. I am on tape six. There are twelve tapes so I am about halfway through. I will probably finish it driving down."

"In just three hours, you are halfway through? I am not even a quarter of the way through."

"Want me to tell you what happened?"

"No. No. Please."

"Krakatoa explodes."

"Not another word. I don't want to hear about it. Not another word."

That night, in my easy chair, I made a determined, desperate attempt to catch up to my significant other and pass her. I read and I read. I got to the part where a guy named Alfred Russel Wallace discovers that all the islands in the western part of the Dutch East Indies archipelago (now Indonesia) have birds and animals totally different from all the Indonesian Islands in the eastern part. The western islands have deer and monkeys and thrushes. The eastern islands have cockatoos and kangaroos and penguins. Why is that? It is 1859, twenty-five years before Krakatoa is going to explode. He presents an academic paper about this finding. Nobody has any explanation for it.

Then I fell asleep.

Late tonight, in just two hours, my significant other returns. She will have Krakatowed herself into a frenzy of excitement over the monumental events that took place there in the Dutch East Indies. As for me, I am still waiting for what the book jacket says are the first rumblings, which take place four years before the explosion.

What was that? people will ask.

Oh, I don't know. Looks like the side of the mountain had a fire on it. The trees are scorched. Maybe somebody forgot to put out a campfire.

I expect to be up all night.

Editorial Independence Takes A Sharp Turn To The Right This Week

By Dan Rattiner

A new American law got passed last which will make it easier for big media conglomerates to snarfle up small newspapers and TV stations than ever before. Clearly it does not bode well for freedom of the press. Many voices have many different opinions. One voice just has one opinion, which is just a phone call away from a powerful head of state. Frankly, I was surprised that our government would decide to pass this new law.

How it will play out I do not know, but there are already some interesting examples in the wind.

There is the matter of Pfc. Jessica Lynch, the fresh-faced young soldier who was captured in Iraq by the enemy and then later freed in a rescue operation. She is still recovering at Walter Reede Hospital in Washington with broken arms and legs. Although this was two and a half months ago, neither she or anybody else has offered an explanation of how she got her injuries. Also she has never given an interview. Indeed, every day that goes by, she is becoming more and more of a candidate for an interview.

Everyone wants to know about her and congratulate her. And it has not been for lack of trying.

Over the past month, she has been contacted by every major news media there is. If she were interested, and I do not know if she is or not, she really could take her pick and one would think she might go with Barbara Walters who could be counted on to do the best interview, or she could go with CBS, tions and denials — that CBS has offered a tie-in with MTV and a book with Simon and Schuster, all of which, including CBS, are owned by Viacom.

"There was a clear distinction made between CBS Network and Simon and Schuster and MTV," spokesperson for CBS Sandy Geneleius said about CBS's talks with Ms. Lynch. "Most of the other network proposals did have some entertainment proposals attached to them, however."

NBC and Fox denied any such thing.

About a month ago, a tremendous campaign, suspiciously like the alleged one with Pfc. Lynch, took place to promote the grand opening of the movie Matrix Reloaded. This was the best and most important movie since the beginning of movie making, if you were to believe that a whole bunch of editors at a whole bunch of magazines independently decided to put the stars of Matrix Reloaded on their covers and tout the film as the most important news story of the week.

Matrix Reloaded is a Warner Brothers film. Warner is a division of AOL Time Warner... so is Time magazine, People magazine, Entertainment Weekly...

which has the highest news show rating, or she could even take the best financial offer for an interview.

What is interesting, however, is that there may well have been — and there are accusa-

Channel (continued from previous page)

It was, however, not hard to follow the trail. Matrix Reloaded is a Warner Brothers film. Warner is a division of AOL Time Warner. But then so is Time magazine, People magazine, Entertainment Weekly magazine and America Online where all the fuss was being made.

It sure looked like an edict from the marketing department at corporate headquarters rather than something decided upon independently at an editor's desk.

And there is lots more.

A TV holding company, called Sinclair Broadcast Group, has purchased a total of 62 television stations around the country. In one market area, Baltimore, they actually own two competing television stations, with the odd result that TV news reporters on one station sometimes make an appearance covering a story on the other. Of course, the editorial positions taken by the anchors at these two stations, curiously, is quite the same too.

Also, curiously, Sinclair executives have now decided to standardize other parts of the newscasts. Up until now, each station in each city has had its own individualized local news studio. Last year, however, Sinclair decided to standardize what these studios would look like.

People who worked at the stations wondered why they went to the trouble. They soon found out. In the town of Hunt Valley, Maryland, which does NOT have a TV station, Sinclair architects built a 63rd standardized news studio just like the other 62.

Local news would start out in Flint, Michigan or Los Angeles, California, and then, at a certain point, the anchors would say "and now to our weather desk" and a man claiming to be from Flint or Los Angeles but actually at the identical studio in Hunt Valley, Maryland would give the local forecast.

"Well, we've got another cold, rainy day here in Flint, today," he might say at 9:15. They would tape it. But then at 9:25 he would come on again and say "So the Santa Anna winds are still warming up Santa Monica this afternoon." And they would tape that. Then it was just a matter of dropping the right segment into the right time slot just after the local anchor would say "and now to our weather desk."

(Can you imagine if they got it backwards, and this weatherman in Maryland, who had just donned a linen sport jacket to give the local weather in Miami had the segment accidentally dropped in as the forecast in Anchorage? People would have heart attacks.)

Well, at corporate headquarters, they would just consider it a bump in the road. They'd bounced 62 local weathermen out into the streets of Anchorage, or Miami, or Los Angeles or Flint. If they got one wrong one night, or if the weatherman in Maryland was so confused he didn't know where he was anymore, that was just the cost of doing business.

The real fear, however, is that if this consolidation keeps up, the President of the United States, to get American opinion on his side, would only have to make one phone call, and that would be to Rupert Murdoch, an Australian.

As author Kurt Vonnegut says in his books, so it goes.

Well, I could go on and on about this as the still independent voice of Dan's Papers, but coming down the hall just now is some guy in a suit with an Australian accent I have never seen before who... •

Chasing Jack Nicholson Eating Ice Cream In East Hampton

By David Lion Rattiner

The end of the workday at the Dan's Papers office all seemed to be going pretty normal. Computers were getting shutdown, people were saying their good byes and heading out to their cars. It was just your average, mid-week, end-of-the-day routine that many of us go through until we finally decide that we are going to wrap up whatever it is that we are doing and head back home. At Dan's Papers, however, interesting things can sometimes happen.

On Wednesday, at around five o'clock, I was slowly packing up my backpack when out of nowhere one of the saleswomen from the front part of the office came flying back into the editorial section of the office at full speed. She was out of breath and wild eyed. I looked up at her in concern. "Is everything all right?"

She could barely speak she was so excited. "Jack Nicholson is on Newton Lane in East Hampton!"

"Are you serious?"

"Yes I'm serious. He is there right now. I heard that he was eating ice cream and waving to everybody. Come on let's go see 'em!"

I was instantaneously energized. I packed everything up in a scramble, grabbed a camera, some film, and ran out of the office top speed to my pick-up truck. I was so excited that Jack Nicholson was in town that I clumsily hurled my backpack (with my laptop computer inside) into the truck bed, the bag landed hard. I didn't care; I just wanted to hit the road.

While driving I could not seem to figure out why I was so excited about Jack Nicholson. A celebrity in East Hampton was nothing new. There have been numerous times that I have had the opportunity to see celebrities out here. Stephen Spielberg, Alec Baldwin, and Kim Cattrall all spend time out in the Hamptons. I once saw Stephen Spielberg down at the ocean, where I used to lifeguard, out with his kids and bodyguards. Heck, even President Clinton hangs out here. For some reason though, Jack Nicholson was a huge deal to me. Maybe it's because Batman is my third favorite action hero and the Joker is my number one favorite villain.

When I finally got to Newtown Lane I realized that this was not just your average celebrity sighting. There were police, there were lights, there were tents, trailers, directors, video cameras and, of course, there was Jack. Sure enough, the guy was eating ice cream. This wasn't Newtown Lane in East Hampton, this was Hollywood Blvd.

I wanted to drive by again but the police were not letting anyone turn around and drive on the other side of the street. I decided to park the pick-up in the Citerella parking lot and walk over to where all of the cameras and tents seemed to be.

The second that I got within fifty yards of what appeared to be the main tent, a short, young guy stopped me. He had one of those plastic earpieces secret service agents wear so they can communicate with other members of the team.

"Hold it right there buddy," he said to me in a stern but unconvincingly threatening tone.

"Oh, hello." I was really nervous for some reason. "My name is Dave, I'm with Dan's Papers."

"So."

His response just made me even more nervous, also kind of mad. The way he said it was kind of degrading. "Well I was hoping that I could get a picture of Mr. Nicholson so that we could put it in the paper."

"Sorry buddy. You can't be here. Nobody can be on this side of the street while we are filming. I'm going to have to ask that you get on the other side of the street please."

I was so close, I could see Jack just up the street. He looked so incredibly cool and confident, which he normally does on the big screen, but I didn't think it would come out in real life as well. He was just simply walking up and down the street still licking his ice cream. It seemed like he was licking it for a while. I started to wonder how it had not melted yet. I started walking.

I decided that I would simply walk across the street like he had asked and try to get some pictures on the other side of the street. I was wishing that I had invested in a camera with a good zoom lens.

The scene on Newton Lane was just bizarre. People on the opposite side of the street from where they were filming were stopped in their tracks. Everyone was just so amazed at what was happening. Jack Nicholson was on the other side of the street shooting a movie that one day, in the near future, will be in the movie theaters. All of these people standing on Newtown Lane will soon be able to go into the movie theater and have the right to say, "I was there when they were filming this scene."

Just because of the simple fact that the guy with the earpiece stopped me from getting close to the set so I could take a picture of Jack Nicholson, I became determined to figure out a way to sneak over to the other side, undetected, and snap a picture of Jack while he was walking down the street.

I started to J-walk across Newtown Lane, cops and all. I didn't care if I got a ticket; this was for Dan's Papers damn it! I made it all the way to the other side of the street with no problems. I was standing right in front of Barefoot Contessa, right where the main tent was. I was undercover. I was an undercover reporter on a top-secret mission. I saw a guy with an earpiece. Uh oh. I made a run for it and dashed into Barefoot Contessa.

Inside, Barefoot Contessa was completely closed. Most of the lights were off and all of the staff was gone except for a few people here and there. I walked up to one of the guys and said hello. The Barefoot Contessa man introduced himself as Parker. I figured that I

First Annual Book Fair By Canio's At Shinnecock Nation Museum

By Leanne Shear

The Shinnecock Indians have always believed in harmony among spirits, plants, animals and humans: their love for the majesty of nature shows up in reverence for what they sometimes call Mother Earth.

I am also normally a nature lover, but I found myself cursing Mother Earth as she poured endless buckets of rain on me as I slowly drove along Montauk Highway to the First Annual Book Fair and reading, which was held at the Shinnecock Nation Museum in Southampton on June 7. I did not know what to expect with this event. Prior to the fair, my knowledge of the Shinnecocks extended about as far as cheap cigarette sales and the Pow-Wow celebration they hold at the end of August each year.

All that changed after I entered the huge log cabin that houses the museum. I once again found myself marveling at all of the symbolism in nature. First of all, it physically surrounded me. The Shinnecock Nation Museum is home to huge stuffed bears, wolves, birds and foxes that looked so real, I kept my distance. Beautiful pictures and paintings of long-deceased tribe members adorned every wall, and a colorful stained glass window cut with a portrait of tribal elders watched over the whole building.

And how the Book Fair came about is yet another testament to nature's fortuitous pat-er rainy day, the seeds for last Saturday's event were planted.

Beverly Jenson, the museum's assistant director, and David Martine, the museum's director, got together with Ms. Calendrille to brainstorm ideas for an event, and a Book Fair seemed to be the perfect way to present to their community a meeting of minds.

Why? Simply put, "We love books!" said Ms. Jenson. And that was certainly a good enough reason for someone like me, whose entire world screeches to an abrupt halt when I am involved in a good read.

The fair was formed to bring together an eclectic group of people to exchange ideas, which is an important task. By using the Shinnecock Nation Museum as a backdrop for that exchange, in many ways, the ante has been upped. Ms. Calendrille feels that by doing so, we also specifically focus on celebrating Native American history, and therefore, avoid the danger "of that story not being heard." After all, the Algonquian language group (of which the Shinnecock Native Americans were a part), is basically terns. Some members of the Shinnecock reservation attended a reading by Native American author Joy Harjo at Canio's Books in Sag Harbor, and one of those members, Josephine Smith, who is the Educational Director at the museum, approached Maryann Calendrille, co-owner of the store, about collaborating on future events and readings. And on what happened to be another extinct, and most of the written history of the various Long Island Indian tribes, including the Shinnecock tribe, was penned by Dutch and English settlers.

John Strong, a local professor and regional expert on Indians, as well as guest author at the book fair, has more recently written, "I think [Native American] history has been ignored," adding, "[But now] there is a new way of looking at the Algonquian people that is essentially from the wigwam out, rather than from the outside in, as it always had been done. It is looking at what they saw, what they experienced... It's an effort to right a wrong in the telling of our history."

If his words are true, the First Annual Book fair is in a real sense a part of history, as are the partners who helped make it happen. Canio's, along with other guest authors like Ron Welburn, Jane Ciabattari, Mark Ciabattari, and E. Barrie Kavasch, helmed tables of books at the fair. "We were thrilled to be a part of a cultural exchange like the Book Fair," said Ms. Calendrille, adding, "It is something positive that celebrates literature including Native American poetry and storytelling." She also told me that some of her regular customers from the shop attended the fair, and in many cases visited the museum for the first time.

The highlight of the book fair, after book signings by the various authors, was the Poetry and Prose readings. To begin, a group of children who lived on the reservation, guided by local poet Wendy Gardner, wrote and read "Hello" poems that detailed who they were, and their own complex (and often poignant) relationships with different aspects of nature. After that, the adult members of the East End Poetry Workshop (museum director David Martine is a member), including special guest Dr. Gaynell Stone, an acclaimed poet, took turns reading their work. Coupled with the history of the natural world and Shinnecock nation that surrounded us in the museum, these poems (with titles like "Nightly Revelations," "Apache Mountain Spirits," and "Quiet Dignity") somehow seemed to reverberate back through time — and in fact make time stand still — to evoke primal feelings of love, pain, beauty and survival in their readers. Needless to say, I was enthralled.

The readings that day illustrated the fact that tumult certainly exists in nature; Consequently, the Shinnecocks are no stranger to it either. In 1876, the whaling boat Circassian wrecked and took many Shinnecock men with it when it sunk. Today, the recent discord over their desire to build a gambling casino and bingo hall and the opposition of some members of the outside community, including politicians like New York Senator Chuck Schumer, might leave a bitter taste in some local mouths, and a desire in others to convince non-believers that gaming is the answer to the tribe's financial problems. But regardless of controversy surrounding a casino compact, on the day of the fair I did not get the feeling that anyone was trying to "sell" me anything about the Shinnecock nation other than a book about its legends, which extend back through thousands of years of ancestry and history. I, of course, happily bought it, and read in its entirety that night while the rain continued to pour outside.

Life Can Be Tough On Men But Why Complain About It?

By Dan Rattiner

As a man, I have a complaint. Not a big one, mind you. Just a little bitty one. We men get to live about eight years less than you women on average. We only make a minor contribution to the biggest event in human life, which is the bearing of children, and this past Sunday, which was Father's Day, we kind of took it on the chin.

Here's what happened. It was all in the newspapers on Monday.

On Saturday evening, a Long Island couple from Holbrook got into a fight driving home after having dinner at a nearby restaurant and when they got to their house, he got out of the car and she ran him over. She was driving a 2003 Ford Trailblazer. He died.

On Sunday evening, after a Father's Day barbecue in the back yard, another Long Island couple, this time in Brentwood, got into an argument and she stabbed him with a kitchen knife. He died in the living room.

On Monday, in a courtroom in Brooklyn, another Long Island woman was acquitted of the death of her husband in a fight outside a restaurant during which witnesses say she

Garbage Wars

By Dan Rattiner

A nasty, silent war is going on in the Hamptons. It takes place every Sunday night and it involves garbage. On the one side are New Yorkers, many of them quite wealthy, who are driving in their BMW's and Mercedes back to Manhattan. On the other side is everybody else, but especially any merchant on the highway with a dumpster. The New Yorkers are agile and fast. The merchants are backed up by the Town and Village police departments and even the State Police which have gotten involved. It is, however, unclear whether any crime is being committed.

One of the first casualties of this war is a

New York stockbroker who has been asked by the East Hampton Town police to stop by the police station this Fourth of July weekend at his convenience to receive a summons. He has been involved for the past two months in an ongoing battle to leave his household garbage in the dumpster of an East Hampton merchant when he goes back to the city Sunday nights. The merchant, having learned the address of the stockbroker by examining the garbage, returns the garbage to the manicured lawn of stockbroker. The stockbroker brings the garbage back to the dumpster. It goes back and forth.

I will tell you that this is a true story and that the merchant involved is someone I know very well. However, the way this garbage is going back and forth has led the merchant to believe that this man might be quite vindictive. He has asked that I not mention the name of his store. I have decided I also will not mention the name of the New Yorker, although I certainly know, as does the merchant, a great deal about him. One of the items he threw out was a copy of his 1990 IRS Income Tax Return.

"Look at this," the merchant said. "He has declared income of $684,466 in the year of 1990. He has all sorts of assets. An apartment on the upper east side. He can afford to have his garbage hauled away. But apparently, trash is just something for somebody else to deal with. His property in East Hampton, you can walk right off his lawn and onto the grounds of the Maidstone Club. He has a gardener. When we brought his trash back there — it is in plastic garbage bags — each time we placed it neatly right by his front door. But he doesn't want to get the message."

I should tell you a little about the merchant without giving him away. He is well to do, retired from the very sort of job in New York this stockbroker has, and he is enjoying being a very leisurely country merchant. He sells very expensive things, much of which he collects. He did, in his day, belong to the very same clubs this stockbroker apparently belongs to. He doesn't like having this man's garbage in his own garbage pickup, which, like the rest of us, he pays for.

The problem, for the merchant, began on April 29, a Monday. He had come in the morning to open his shop, had put the key in the lock when he saw this mound of garbage bags in his dumpster. They were strange bags. Not his.

Curious, he opened one. He found a basket of used tennis balls, some pampers, some boxes that had contained children's toys, various tissues and food scraps, and then this tax return.

It was the tax return that got him. $684,466 a year and an Upper East Side Address. It made him angry.

"We looked his name up in the local directory, found where he lived, and we took his garbage back to put it on his lawn. I then went to the Town Police department. I told them about this. I gave them a copy of the tax return. They said there was nothing they could do and did I want to file a complaint? What was my date of birth? What has that got to do with it, I asked."

Though the police were not very forthcoming on this first complaint, it should be noted that they have been and are very active in this War of the Sunday Garbage. At six p.m., when the East Hampton dump closes, they station a police car right by the chain link fence at the entrance. The policeman in this police car is an intimidating figure right adjacent to the big sign that says the dump is closed at six. And when the weekenders in their cars drive up the long driveway to the fence to drop their trash before heading home, they just make a U turn and drive away. The Town has found that if they do not station a police car there then on Monday morning the Highway Department arrives to find mounds of garbage bags by the fence.

I mentioned that the State Police are involved in the war. It seems that an obvious spot for people to dump their garbage — it is now still in their car along with the kids, the tennis rackets, the wife and the golf clubs slowly turning rancid — is the historic rest stop at the head of Georgica Pond by Sapore di Mare Restaurant. This is a state highway, and though the state police do not station an officer there on Sunday afternoon and evening, they do show up Monday morning and go through the trash. They send out a bill to whoever's trash they can determine is there. They really do.

Two weeks went by. And there it was, once again, the garbage from the same stockbroker in the merchant's dumpster. More pampers and food, an empty Barone Fini wine container. A bill from a Manhattan storage

By Dan Rattiner

In an article in The New York Times this spring, a man named Irwin D. Simon, President of the Hain Celestial Group, was described as perhaps the leading player in the natural food industry in America.

"Irwin voluntarily adopted tough standards for natural food well ahead of the new Federal labeling requirements several years ago," said David Seckman, the executive director of the Natural Nutritional Foods Association. "He spearheaded our efforts to develop higher standards across the industry."

Seckman was talking about the fact that in the fast growing natural foods industry, definitions of such words as "natural," or "dietetic" or "organic" were ill defined by many players in the industry. The government proposed strict standards. Simon, noting that the effort would take years to pass, simply took on the ones in the bill. As probably the largest manufacturer of natural foods in America, people fell in line behind him.

Irwin Simon had entered the natural foods industry with a company grossing four million dollars about ten years ago. In good times and tough times, his company has continued to grow. In the year 2000, it did just over $200 million in business. This year it will do $700 million. His products can be found in just about every supermarket in America and include Earth's Best Baby Foods, Terra Chips, Nile Spice Soups, Health Valley, Celestial Seasonings, Kineret Kosher Foods, Garden of Eatin' and Westsoy. The defining moment in his business life, took place in 1991 when it occurred to him people wanted to buy healthier food than they did before, as long as it still tasted good. Simon has spearheaded that trend. His business surely has accelerated a shift toward a healthier America.

I talked to Irwin Simon, who is 42, at Danny's Poxabogue Cafe in Water Mill, just four miles from the home in Sagaponack that he shares with his wife and three children. He has what sounds like a flat, upstate accent, but when I asked him about it, I learned that it was much farther than upstate.

"I was born in raised in Glace Bay, Nova Scotia," he said. "This is a coal and fishing town. In the winter we would get between five and six feet of snow — that is the average — and much of the time you would leave your house by jumping down from a second story window."

"My dad had a candy store in town. He also was the kosher meat butcher. He had five children, my three sisters and my brother, who live in Toronto and me"

Simon went to the local high school in Glace Bay and then went to St. Mary's University in Halifax where in 1979 he earned a degree in business and finance.

"Like many people from small town America, or from Canada," he said, "I wanted to come to New York City."

He didn't go directly. He started out moving to Toronto where his three older sisters and brother lived, and he got a job with William Neilson, the licensee for Haagen Dazs ice cream, which, as I am sure you know, is one of the most fattening snacks known to man. After five years, he got a job at the North American headquarters of Haagen Daz and he moved to be near their offices in Teaneck, New Jersey. He was in the New York Metropolitan Area and that is where he wanted to be.

Simon met Daryl, the woman who was to become his wife, in 1986 at a sharehouse in Westhampton Beach. She was 25 and had just broken up with her boyfriend and thought her "life was over." It wasn't.

For three years after 1986, Simon continued to come out to Westhampton Beach, but his business instincts took over. He decided to run a sharehouse himself instead of just pay someone for a share in one. It was on Blue Jay Lane in the Wildwood section of Westhampton Beach.

"But it was too much work for not very much money," Simon said. "I'd be in Dallas with my regular business and people would call up to say the house is dirty. The following year, I took a pass."

In 1989, an American company called Grand Metropolitan acquired Haagen Dazs, a Scandinavian firm, and Simon found that he was out of a job.

"I learned something," he said. "I was a Canadian. I found I could not get a job in America working for an American firm unless I had a green card or corporate sponsorship. This was a problem."

In 1991 Simon got a sponsorship from the Slim Fast company.

Also in 1991, he got married. Daryl had grown up in Hong Kong and there were many people from the Pacific Rim at the wedding.

"There was another problem. Before I could get a temporary green card, I was called into the immigration office. Oh, what they put you through. They are looking for arranged marriage situations. They asked me about my wife's habits, about what cologne she wore, all sorts of private questions. They asked her about me. We passed the test."

"I became their sales manager and marketer."

And this was the first time I realized the value of healthier and good for you foods. Ever since that time, as I have looked to market products, I consider four benchmarks. They have to be great products, they have to be great tasting, they have to have a reason for being and they have to have nutritional value."

After two years at Slim Fast, Simon felt he was ready to go out on his own. He left that firm, and with $250,000 of his own money that he had saved up, he put together a small holding company to buy, with long term payouts, still smaller food companies that Simon felt could pass his four benchmarks test. They were Kineret Kosher, Pizaso, Farm Foods and California Slim. The total outlay would be $4 million, which he did not have, and so he arranged for a Wall Street firm to offer stock to the general public to complete the sale. He used Lew, Lieberbaum and Company for this effort, and though the offering was successful, many potential investors pointed out to him that Lew, Lieberbaum did not have a very good reputation. Indeed, when it was over, he found he was in the same place he had been before he began, a man with $250,000 who was $4 million in debt.

"I felt during that year I was a squirrel in a cage," he told me. "We'd done all this work. After this was over, I told investors and friends that I was glad I had done it and I had used this firm because at the time I wanted to go to the prom, and no other person would go with me."

In hindsight it seems that Lew, Lieberbaum and Wall Street were very good choices for Simon.

A few years after that, the Hain Pure Foods Company, a maker of rice cakes and canola oil, came on the market.

"It was owned by Pet Foods, it was losing money and they wanted $21 million for it. I had this little $4 million company which had grown a bit by that time so I bid $21 million. I met with them. And they believed me when I told them I could raise the money. I borrowed $14 million from a bank and $7 million from the 12% high yield guys. So I bought Hain and was now a man with $250,000 and $22 million in debt and I'm thinking, boy is this a great country or what!"

To complete the transaction, Simon had to immediately make Hain into something stronger. He changed the name of his small holding company, which had been Kineret to The Hain Food Group. He sold a rice cake factory in Cold Water Ohio for $2.5 million and then became a customer of the new owner of the factory. He reduced inventory by $2.5 million and then he exercised warrants that bought him an additional $8 Million, which he used to payoff most of Hain's debts.

"It was a great balancing act in those years," he said.

But he persevered. Today, Hain Celestial does $700 million in business, employ's 2,000 article. Also, there are fewer sharks in our area.

"The cold weather has delayed the fish migration," said Captain Bill Ricca of the Montauk Captain's Association. "Until the water warms up there will not be that many sharks. Plus, the shark population is far smaller than what it was fifteen years ago."

That's good news in general, but if you get bit,

As far as the gypsy moth caterpillar problem is concerned, there is just no predicting it. Every few years, we have an attack of them. They are very small creatures, all fuzzy and about as big as your thumb, which is very much smaller than a shark, but in the masses in which they breed and hatch they can be a big menace. Six years ago, they chewed the leaves off about 10% of the trees on the East End. Then three years ago a massive infestation hit the Northwest Harbor between East Hampton and Sag Harbor. The entire forest got defoliated there that July, and the chewing spread rapidly toward populated areas which so alarmed the populace that Suffolk County prepared a massive spraying assault to stop it, not because it could be harmful to humans, but because it could kill all the trees. Debate went back and forward about this, but with the spraying day just one week away, suddenly all the chewing stopped. All the gypsy moth caterpillars had died. The problem was solved in a natural way.

There has also been no sign of the "Brown Tide," a huge infestation of red and maroon algae and microscopic plankton that clogs as much as forty miles of our bays and coastlines along the north shore of our island, killing clams, fish and lobsters and which makes swimming a disgusting experience for months on end. (Usually when it arrives, you see it first in a small patch maybe a mile long somewhere. Signs that it might come are warm water surface temperatures, high water nutrient content, low salinity and calm seas. Also rainy weather followed by sunny weather. Keep an eye out.)

* * *

We haven't had a problem with stinging jellyfish in our harbors in several years either. I got pretty stung up going for a swim off my boat in Three Mile Harbor once. But that was six years ago.

Ticks are in serious abundance this spring, on the other hand. These are little tiny brown bugs which can crawl around on your skin, or the skin of your dog, and then bite (painlessly) but can give you tick fever, babesiosis or Lyme Disease. If you run a high fever or feel pain in your joints, see a doctor immediately. They now have pills which can in many cases deal quickly with this problem. But you have to get it early.

There has been an infestation of carpenter bees this spring on the East End. They are bigger than bumble bees and because they travel in swarms they can be very nasty looking. But they don't bite, and they should go away by the end of June. Right now, frisky fellas that they are, they are breeding.

Phragmites, tall reed like plants that originally came here from the island of Kudzu, Japan, continue to take over large parts of the wetlands near ponds on the east end, smothering or crowding out more indigenous plants. An organization called the Weed Management Project, composed would get some information.

"So what is all this?" I asked.

"I think that they are shooting a romantic comedy with Jack Nicholson. Some people were saying that Keanu Reeves is in it as well."

"Wow this is like a real deal movie. I just saw him eating ice cream two seconds ago. Are you guys providing him with that?"

"No they brought their own cooler. It was Baskin Robbin's ice cream. They had one guy scooping it and another guy running out and handing it to him."

"What kind was it?"

"It looked like vanilla but I can't be sure."

We started talking some more and I found out that Barefoot Contessa shut down their store for the entire day. All of the filming was done outside on the sidewalk with the Barefoot Contessa sign in the background. They paid the store for the day and changed the outside of it a little bit. They also left out some Dan's Papers in front of the store to make it look really authentic. They did no filming inside — Jack was never in the store — however, I was told they replicated the entire interior in a studio in Hollywood and are shooting the inside scenes there.

I wanted to find out more but I heard the door open to Barefoot Contessa and a guy with a plastic earpiece came inside. Like lightening, I dashed to the back of the store.

We had made eye contact, however, so I decided to give up. I still had not gotten my picture.

No words were spoken; I just walked out of the store and across the street, defeated. Walking across, halfway there, I noticed that Jack was making another walk down the sidewalk on Newtown Lane. I took up my camera, put my finger on the trigger and fired. I felt like paparazzi. It was kind of a bad feeling.

Fifteen minutes later a black Mercury Sable pulled up to the side of the street, Jack got in the car and drove off. The word was that everyone was going on a lunch break, including Mr. Nicholson.

Will Martha Stewart have to leave her Georgica digs to be ImCarcerated or will her defense exonerate her? Martha's lawyers maintain that securities fraud charges were not leveled against former MedImmune Vice President Eric Tsao who was charged with civil - not criminal - charges after allegedly lying to the SEC about insider trading in three separate episodes involving shares in ImClone and two other companies.

ImClone founder Sam Waksal, convicted of insider trading, has been sentenced to Eglin Federal Prison in Florida on July 2. Dress code and cubicles aside, the minimum security prison is know as Club Fed for a reason.

company for storage of skis and ski equipment. He could hardly believe it.

"Here is what disturbed me the second time. Let us assume for a minute that he still failed to make any arrangements to get rid of his garbage on Sunday. Going down the Montauk Highway there are more than a hundred merchants with a hundred dumpsters. He knew I had returned the garbage. He chose to put it back where it came from."

Once again the merchant went to the police. Once again they asked him all about himself and his date of birth and once again he became agitated.

"I'll put the report in the basket," the officer said, "but if it isn't filled out just right it might wind up in the garbage."

Where would the police garbage go?

Once again, the merchant took the stockbroker's garbage back down to the house and placed it by the front door.

The matter came to a head one week later. That Monday morning, once again, there was garbage from the stockbroker in the merchant's dumpster. This time, however, there was also garbage that was double bagged. And when the merchant opened it, he found that it contained THE VERY SAME GARBAGE HE HAD RETURNED TO THE STOCKBROKER FROM THE WEEK BEFORE.

There are several other shops in this area, and several other shop owners came over to have a look.

"I think these tennis balls were used only once," one of these neighbors said, bouncing one.

"Put it back," the merchant said. "I am returning EVERYTHING. EVERYTHING."

There was something very odd about how the stockbroker had made this latest drop off. All the new garbage, not the double-bagged garbage from the week before, had been carefully prepared so as not to contain any evidence about where it had come from. No magazines, no junk mail, no newspapers. But whoever did it was not careful enough. Down at the very bottom the merchant found a single, damp envelope, addressed to the stockbroker and containing an invitation to a fundraiser.

This time, at the police department, action would be taken. They'd talk to the stockbroker at his place of business. After great effort, the police were able to break through a formidable barrier of secretaries manning telephones to tell the stockbroker there was a summons waiting for him in East Hampton. He wouldn't be out for several weeks, he said. He would be out for the Fourth of July weekend. That's just fine, the police said. When you do come out stop in at the police station please. We have something for you.

And this is something he cannot throw in the garbage.

ADDENDUM

A number of years ago, this newspaper received a "tip" from an anonymous caller that if I wanted to see something extraordinary, I should drive north on Wainscott Harbor Road, cross the railroad tracks, go up a dirt road to the right and about a hundred yards in look and see what was there.

What was there was all the trash, files and records from a United States Congressman who had served this district in the 1950's. The Congressman was a very respected man by the name of Stuyvesant Wainwright III.

I spent an entire afternoon poring through these fascinating files. They were actually from his office in Washington. Sensitive files from nuclear facilities. Secret files from military bases. Applications from local people who wanted their sons to get into West Point. Letters to lobbyists. I did indeed write about this in the newspaper.

A few weeks later, I got a call from the Congressman's son. Yes, the trash had been cleaned up and they were embarrassed about it. Congressman Wainwright had been divorced, and these files had been in the basement of his summer home in the Hamptons, which his wife, as a result of the divorce proceedings, got.

According to the Congressman's son, about eight years had passed and the wife had rented out the house to tenants. The tenants had called the wife and said what do you want to do with these files in the basement? And the wife said you could throw them out. The tenants had called a carter who, instead of taking them to the dump (open at the time), had instead quite illegally dropped them all off in the woods.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #253

Yeah, that's the Ticket...

Thursday, June 12, a CF occurred in the North Ferry line on the Greenport side. For those who have never served in the military, let me explain. There are three levels of foul ups. First, the SNAFU; Situation Now All F___ Up. As a SNAFU worsens, it becomes a FUBAR; F___ Up Beyond All Recognition. A severe FUBAR, once in awhile, can become the dreaded CF; Cluster F___. A CF is when it's coming at you from all sides and there's no escape. I've seen many SNAFU's in my time. I've seen several FUBARs, but this was the first time I'd ever seen a bona fide CF.

The ferrymen on the North Ferry, in addition to being handsome, intelligent, virile and debonair, work very hard to keep that line moving. All the ferry workers north and south work in freezing cold, sweltering heat, blistering winds with one focus in mind, keep the lines moving.

I got a report from two friends who rode the first ferry from Greenport that morning. The big boat, the Mashomack, was down with a mechanical problem, which is no big deal unless...

From out of nowhere, giant full-size construction trucks appear full of gravel and asphalt. Not just a few, but closer to a dozen and they kept coming all day. Trucks that big have to travel in the center of the ferry and no one likes to be on with them. The person in charge of the convoy must not have called ahead to warn the North Ferry of the impending invasion because if they had, they would have been told that big trucks line up in a certain area and do NOT get in line with the cars, because the ferryman can't see around big trucks to signal cars to come forward and conversely people in line can't see around giant trucks to see the ferryman's signals. So the huge trucks got in line with the cars and within minutes of the first boat, a SNAFU was in progress. People had to drive around or get out of their vehicles to see the ferrymen. The lines blurred and cars were creating parallel lines, which advanced the SNAFU to FUBAR level. The truck drivers were walking around having coffee and talking because only one truck could cross at a time. One friend told me, his usual ten-minute commute took over an hour, through no fault of the North Ferry.

Since the line was running abnormally slow, the morning traffic backed up on the island side, too. Meanwhile, as mid-morning approached, on the Greenport side, the wiser tourists were arriving a day early to avoid the Friday traffic. The blameless tourists arrived in Greenport expecting to find a ferry line and instead found mayhem with swearing, honking and partial lines starting and stopping everywhere. The addition of the tourists advanced the FUBAR to the CF level.

I tried to figure out where these trucks were going. If they were just commuting from the North Fork to South Fork, they would have given up and driven around rather than spend hours waiting for a boat. Maybe there were going to build a new road, maybe the foundation for the new cell tower. Then the second clue showed up two days later.

My little brother David got to his job at The Chequit at 6:30 a.m. as usual. The Chequit, the beautiful old hotel/bar/restaurant, is a great place staffed with wonderful hard working people who really extend themselves to tourists. David arrived to find guests practically meeting him at his truck complaining of no coffee, no hot water and power outages all over. Apparently the whole hotel was filled with guests for the same wedding who had all gotten up at the same time to meet the wedding schedule. David had me laughing hysterically as he explained how he had to explain to them that when forty people shower at the same time, the tanks drain! And when 40 people use their blow dryers and curling irons at once, it blows fuses in old buildings. Since the guests were all up before the kitchen staff was in, David was pulling the pre-prepared pastries trays out of the fridge for the guests and making coffee (probably flavored with spackle since he was making it) between throwing switches and telling people to give the water heaters a chance. The situation marginally qualified as a

"Giving Back"

It's not ALL about the non-stop celebrity parties, glitz and glamour in the Hamptons. There are also people giving to worthy causes. What comes around goes around, and people in the Hamptons are no exception. Hamptonites know how to party, but they are also experts on giving back and contributing to worthy causes in the community.

Eager volunteers from all ages traveled cross country, just to attend adman and restaurateur, Jerry Della Femina & Metro TV host Judy Licht's, sprawling oceanfront home in East Hampton, for the sixteenth Annual Garden Gala. An annual event that supports Body Positive, an organization that assists people with HIV/AIDS. Public Relations guru, Edward Callaghan and John Wegorzewski work hard every year to get the word out and help make this event a summer staple. Jerry and Judy host the event and literally open up their home every year to anyone wanting to help make a difference. Jerry told me, "HIV/AIDS is not over, this is not a gay disease. People are sick and we must find a cure, we won't give up." Judy is adamant to find a cure. She points out that, "People are living with serious health issues, they need more guidance then ever and Body Positive does it so well, everyone should support this great organization." Of course there was good food, a silent auction filled with goodies and plenty of socializing, but the main purpose is raising money for a great cause. WABC's weatherman, Sam Champion, a long time supporter of the gala SNAFU. David said all the men were dressed in blue pants with suspenders, which was the third clue.

To the ordinary well-adjusted person of average or better intelligence not suffering from paranoid ideation, there would be no obvious connection between dozens of trucks and a wedding party. CF's and SNAFU's aren't usually linked, unless you know what to look for. Thank God I can connect these dots.

Suppose the wedding party was a diversion? The men in blue pants wore suspenders because they didn't wear belts — just think about that — and belts are used in machinery (like trucks), yeah, that's the ticket, trucks with enough gravel and asphalt to build something big. It would be bigger than a driveway, but not as big as the Statue of Liberty, something in between I think... like a small island? A man made island. Yeah, that's the ticket.

Somewhere off the coast of Shelter Island, men in blue pants are making a new island to build a mansion without worrying about town codes. It's all clear now. Someone finally thought of making their own island to get around the codes and this man is probably wearing blue pants on the island right now, trying to blend in, but as we all know, "A man and his pants are soon parted." Yeah, that's the ticket!

The stock meanwhile, is trading about twenty times higher than it was a decade ago. And the company makes a healthy profit.

Simon is a great believer in his products. He also believes in spirituality and children's causes. He is working with Rabbi Konikov to develop a new synagogue in Southampton on Hill Street. He is a supporter in the fight against children's and babies illnesses, including pediatric cancer. He's also on the boards of many other companies and this year received an honorary law degree from the College of Cape Breton in Nova Scotia where he also gave the commencement speech.

Simon and his wife have a daughter, twin boys, and a fourth on the way. They live on the Upper East Side in the city and at their home in Sagaponack. His wife and family spend the summer in Sagaponack while he comes out weekends and the kids go to tennis camp. They enjoy bike riding and horseback riding. Simon notes he especially loves it here in the wintertime.

It does remind him, perhaps a little bit, of home.

and recipient of the Second Annual James Revson Memorial Award created by Tiffany & Company, accepted the award saying, "The people who actually do the work are behind the line of cameras and we should thank them."

Next noteworthy fundraiser: the annual "Schools Out." This event supports the ONLY gay and lesbian high school in the nation. This event raised over seventy-five thousand dollars for the Hetrick-Martin Institute. Executive Director, David Mensah was thrilled, he told me, "Sixteen years and we are still growing. The school is expanding from fifty to one hundred and seventy kids, we are very excited about it."

This party is not just another fabulous benefit in a big mansion; this event changes people's lives. David says, "If you are a homeless kid living on the street or in an unsafe situation you can come to HMI and find a place." Guests enjoyed fabulous food and danced the night away, but make no mistake this party means serious business. Southampton resident and avid supporter Robert Zimmerman told me, "The Hamptons is a community with a conscience and a community that knows how to have a good time." I couldn't have said it better myself.

of 15 public agencies and private groups, has begun a fight to tear out the phragmites as fast as they can grow. So far, so good.

Then there are the 43 different varieties of mosquitos and the West Nile Virus that has made everybody crazy. Look out for Culex pipiens, or Culex restuans or Aedes albopictus (the Asian tiger mosquito), or the nasty Ochlerotatus sollicitans that hang around marshes. Ochlerotatus sollicitans can fly up to 25 miles at a time. On the other hand, male Ochlerotatus sollicitans don't bite people. They eat nectar from flowers only. It's the females that will get you.

Experts say that many of the ways we cope with mosquitoes are good, but a few we think are good are bad. Bug sprays that contain Deet are very effective. Overturning buckets and pails around your house that collect standing water is effective. But bug zappers mostly cook moths and beetles so it seems that they work but they don't. Although they probably give a good Culex pipiens a nasty start. Bats, by the way — some people make nests of bats — do not feed on mosquitoes.

Deer continue to be a problem here, particularly in North Haven, though the deer population there has been reduced, it is believed, by about a third from previous years. They don't bite of course (although they could lick you pretty good), but they do eat up all your shrubbery, landscaping, flowers and vegetable gardens. North Haven has passed new laws involving deer fences this spring. You'll need to shrub them in so they are less visible. Also make them out of approved materials. Their height cannot be more than six feet. (Until now, it has been eight feet.)

There's a sign on an eight-foot tall deer fence in Mecox that reads SAVING OUR CROPS WITHOUT HURTING THE DEER. Yeah, right. They can see the food but they can't get to the food. Like that doesn't hurt?

There are no poisonous snakes in the Hamptons. There are no lions or cougars either. I've never seen an elephant here. Except once a year at the circus.

There is a definite increase in the seal population in these parts. The seals swim down from the coast of Maine to enjoy the cooler weather here. Usually they sit on rocks out in the ocean just offshore, but sometimes they come up on the beach to sun themselves. Leave them alone. They're cute but they bite.

The beautiful white swans which grace the ponds in the downtowns of many of our local villages also bite. The various mayors suggest you do not feed them as they do just fine on their own.

We had a tornado last year, the first in nearly twenty years. Didn't do much.

We have earthquakes but they are so mild you hardly ever feel them. None have ever caused property damage, at least since we have monitored earthquakes here, which is for about the last 60 years.

We've never had a typhoon.

Sometimes it rains real hard, though.

Answered Questions

Q: What's your favorite Hamptons activity?

This Week's Answer By: Michael Kenyon

"Waiter, Bring Me A Pencil"

For some years I was in a small way a restaurant critic for Granny Poo's Restaurant Review: East End Eating Epigrams: incognito, feeling at times lordly, in a position to bestow accolades, and at other times furtive, grubby, like a flasher in a macintosh. I gave the job up because (1) a new owner of the guide required reviewers to limit themselves to one glass of wine, (2) the guide folded, the owner going off to Washington, D.C. with her husband, aide to Senator Moynihan.

This field experience allows me to command a restaurant review from Southampton College students in English 369: Critical Analysis.

"Anyone using the word 'delicious' is automatically disqualified from a grade higher than C," I warn. "The tournedos is ineffable, cosmic, symphonic, seamless, existential, phantasmagorical, but never 'delicious'."

They look at me blankly. Finding synonyms for 'delicious' may not be the knottiest problem for a food critic, but it's high on the list, or it was on mine.

"Be accurate, be honest," I exhort. "When writing your review, a vital prop will be the menu, but if it's hand-written on vellum you may be discouraged from taking it away. A twenty-page wine list bound in doeskin as at Sag Harbor's American Hotel will be extracted from you the instant you have made your choice. Explain that they're for your aunt who is considering reserving a table for her discussion group. If the management remains obstinate, steal them."

Some of the class, horrorstruck, will clearly do no such thing. Others anticipate stealing the menu as the highlight of their restaurant review.

"Be brilliant," I instruct. "More crucial than being brilliant—be readable."

Potential readership for Granny Poo may not have been massive but it was choice. Crowned heads from across the pond, rock stars, hedge-fund managers on their way to jail, TV celebrity anchors, and Hollywood's finest. This is not to say that the moment these great and glorious arrived in the Hamptons they fell upon Granny Poo, but they may have. They too must eat.

I tell English 369: "Restaurant reviewing is glamorous. You dine at the swankiest places and hand the bill to your editor. But it's not for everyone."

The drawback to restaurant reviewing is that

hit him on the head with her size-12 high heel shoe. This happened one week before Father's Day.

All three of these men were killed by the women who bore their children.

"This is such a shocker like you can't believe," said neighbor Jerry Donatelli about the woman who ran over her husband. "And on Father's Day. They were generally happy, hard-working people. He didn't deserve to go out this way."

"They were a lovely couple. They were hard working and they lived for their kids," said a neighbor, Liliana Kaz about the stabbing with a kitchen knife incident.

"Most of the time Bonds (the boyfriend) was on top," a witness to the high heel shoe incident said. "But then Rhinehard got on top."

Both are 5 foot 9, but Anna Rhinehard, age 40, weighs 220 pounds while her boyfriend, age 52, weighs (or weighed) 180 pounds. They have a six-year-old son.

In court, Rhinehard said she left the scene leaving him outside the restaurant because she didn't know how badly he had been hurt. She also said she misses Bonds.

"Case dismissed," said the judge.

you cannot relax and enjoy the meal. You have to write about it, and unless you have total recall you will need to make notes. But you must not be seen to be making notes. Bribes of caviar might arrive and the delightful waitress who brought the bread will be banished, to be replaced by a senior, forelock-tugging garçon of suffocating formality.

Alternatively, the maître d' may loom and declare, "We do not serve critics."

This never happened to me, but critics have been barred from restaurants, as theater critics have been excluded from previews. Important restaurant reviewers commonly arrive in disguise, or so I hear. Mimi Sheraton and Ruth Reichl, former reviewers for the New York Times, owned a battery of wigs. Reviewers routinely telephone a fake name to the reservations desk and disguise their voice by holding their nose.

For Granny Poo, where reviews were anonymous, I had no need for dark glasses or speaking with a Hungarian accent. Nobody had heard of me. Some restaurants had not heard of Granny Poo. The review tried to cover all restaurants, pizza palaces and ice-cream parlors in the Hamptons, and we contributors visited plenty of greasy spoons that were too busy dishing forth the burgers to be aware of restaurant guides and a spy on the premises.

They become aware if they notice a customer copying the menu into a notebook, scribbling during each course, cupping a hand to an ear to identify the music (a review should include ambiance), and asking the charming, bare-legged waitress her name (for a possible quote) and how she likes it here. My nightmare was that I would forget my pencil. In cafés in France a supply of writing material is available free of charge, but these customers are writing a novel, and the management is flattered. Ask for a pencil when on assignment for Granny Poo and the waiter could smell a rat.

How does a reviewer make notes without being seen to make notes? I never found out. Writing on your knee under the table doesn't work because you can't see, the tablecloth gets in the way, and the male knee is bony. If you use the table to write on you will have the napkin ready to slam over your notebook when the sommelier sails in, but this requires vigilance, and always undetected staff are scuttling by.

Knowledge of food is an advantage but not essential, I inform English 369. The secret is teamwork. If you grew up in England on a wartime diet of tinned spam, sardines and Heinz spaghetti hoops, if you're still not sure what to make of okra, if you confuse your chasseur with your chou-fleur — if, in short, you're a restaurant reviewer who is not confident about what you are eating, you need a table mate who is. Mine, Victoria, knows. She would taste, I would jot down her comments, and later assemble them in imperishable prose.

Restaurant reviewing is on my mind because I've again been allotted English 369. The opinion of students on what a splendid course it is must have filtered through to the head of the department. Especially stealing the menu.

SAPPHIRE PORTRAIT PICNIC

The 45th Annual summer Party for Southampton Hospital was held on Father's Day at the Southampton home of James Finkelstein and Pamela Gross. Some of the Hamptons best known families brought their young ones to enjoy the trampoline, dolphin slide and petting zoo and have their picture taken with Mickey Mouse and Elmo while the parents sipped Veuve Clicquot champagne. The glorious Sapphire Ball Gala for Southampton Hospital will be on August 2. It was a terrific event for kids and the dads (and moms) they brought in the welcome sunshine.

FULL MOON GALA

The Group for the South Fork is a dedicated group of advocates committed to protecting and preserving the East End's fragile environment. The dinner dance and auction was held at the scenic Wolffer Estate in Sagaponack. There were cocktails, a silent auction, and then dinner, dancing and a lively live auction where two tables seemed to be bidding against each other on every item. The evening seemed to mix together the year-rounders with the summer folk in this serene setting; isn't that what it's all about?

Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company! Production Of A Broadway Hit

By Jolie Trueman-Honey

Great drama is just that, great drama. And I'm not talking about Shakespeare or Chekhov or Shaw. I'm describing the experience of being riveted by the words and actions onstage. And this was my experience on opening night of the Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company's production of Agnes of God, the award-winning play by John Pielmeier. Considering that it was a Friday night at the end of an exhausting work week, anything short of compelling would have left my head bobbing on my neck.

The setup of the play, which had a lengthy run on Broadway in 1980 and was later translated into film, is simple; the ideas that it explores are not. It is narrated by Dr. Martha Livingstone, a psychiatrist who has been hired by the court to examine a young nun who stands accused of manslaughter. It is her job to determine if Agnes is competent to stand trial. Accompanying Agnes is her Mother Superior, a woman who seems quite emotionally invested in the girl and who has an abiding interest in the outcome of Livingstone's investigation. An interesting trinity at the outset.

The theater company has done much to involve the audience in the ambience of the play. As one passes from the well-lit lobby into the inner sanctum of the theater itself, one is already being seduced into the world of Agnes. A faint Gregorian chant is heard in the background while the subtle scent of incense steals up the aisle. The walls and ceiling are black, furnishings on the stage spare. The long narrow configuration of the room puts one in mind of a novice's cell.

We hear Agnes singing before we ever see her,

Vay David, Cayley Waldo, and Toni Munna

and, indeed, she has the voice of an angel. Mother Superior believes her to be gifted; she hears voices. Described by the older woman as "an innocent," Agnes was raised in isolation by a mother who never exposed her to television or books or to public schooling, for that matter. Played superbly by Cayley

Waldo, Agnes does seem otherworldly as she talks about her love of God and the "lovely lady" who talks to her. Mother Miriam Ruth fears that the scientific probing of Agnes' mind could damage her spiritual connection.

Here's the problem: a few months earlier, Agnes excused herself from Vespers because she didn't feel well. When Mother Miriam Ruth checked on her later, she found Agnes unconscious on the floor of her room, blood everywhere, and a dead infant lying in a wastepaper basket with its umbilical cord wrapped around its neck. So, the problem here is not "whodunnit," but "whodunwhat."

When first approached by Livingstone, Agnes claims not to remember anything about that night. But as she begins to trust the doctor, she opens up to her, revealing a deeply disturbed mind. After much probing and the eventual use of hypnosis, Livingstone discovers many of Agnes' secrets. Religion, it seems, has become Agnes' escape of choice, a way for her to ward off her demons and to express the love that was denied her in childhood.

Of course, Mother Miriam Ruth sees things quite differently. She believes that Agnes truly communicates with a heavenly lady. She has witnessed the stigmata appear on the girl's hands and believes

Cast In Stone (And Other Materials): Sculptors Of The East End

Olinka Broadfoot, who came to the North Fork in 2000, is this year's William Steeple Davis artist-in-residence in Orient. She recently unveiled a portrait of Mr. Davis at Poquatuck Hall. "It is the work that should speak to you, if it doesn't, nothing I can say makes any difference."

Currently working in many different mediums,

Cutchogue sculptor Robert Strimban creates sculptures out of wood, bronze, aluminum, stainless steel, paper and assemblages out of wood aside from drawings and paintings. "My work is really about nature," he said. "I just abstract it."

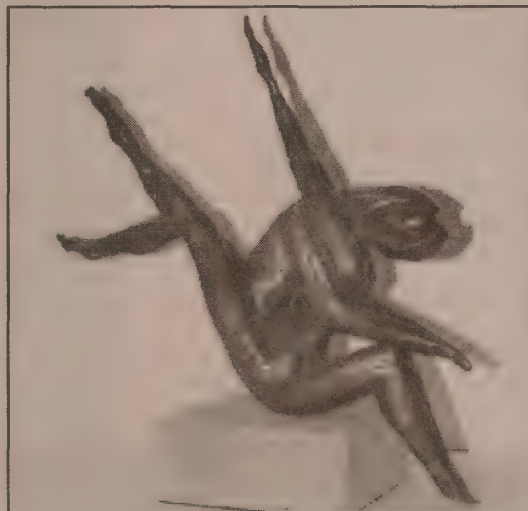

John Philip Capello, who lives in Sag Harbor, is a self-taught direct carver who begins each piece without sketching or even knowing what form it will take. The result is always startlingly lifelike but also fantastic, often a blend of human and animal or plant forms on a theme from ancient mythology or history.

Madwoman (continued from previous page)

that the infant might actually be a virgin birth.

And so we have this most basic of conflicts: science versus religion.

Livingstone, an angry ex-Catholic, wants to help free the girl of her delusions and her terror, to make her "sane." The Mother Superior wants Agnes to be shielded from the world to protect her "primitive sense of wonder."

This is a play that challenges the beliefs and assumptions of every member of the audience. In an era when so many of the phenomena around us can be explained by science, when we know so much of genetics that we can engineer new human beings, when we know so much about our universe that we can study stars that are over ten million light years away, is there still room for miracles? Can faith and science truly coexist?

Rest assured, this play is no philosophical treatise. It is a taut psychological drama; we want to know what really happened. Who was the father of that baby, who the murderer? What is Mother Miriam Ruth's real interest in Agnes? Does Dr. Livingstone succeed and at what cost?

This play is a tour de force for the three actors. While Toni Munna in the role of Martha Livingstone seemed to have a slight case of opening night jitters, it must be noted that she is onstage throughout the entire performance and ably captured both the cynicism and the sadness of the character. Vay David gave a very solid performance as Mother Miriam Ruth, but the inspiration truly came from Cayley Waldo's touching Agnes.

I must mention that the production took place in the small theater known for many years as the Mini Cine on Peconic Avenue in Riverhead. The theater resides on the first floor of the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall which is now being lovingly restored to its former glory when, at the turn of the century, it was the premier opera house on the East End. (In fact, if you attend a performance of Agnes, you will be invited, during intermission, to take a tour upstairs.) When fully renovated, it will, undoubtedly, be Riverhead's finest attraction.

Neither Agnes nor the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall should be missed.

"Agnes of God" is playing on Friday, June 20 and Saturday, June 21 at 8, and on Sunday, June 22 at 2 p.m.. Tickets are $18, $15 for seniors and students. For further information, call 631 369-4661.

The Kitchen at Greenport

74825 Route 25, Greenport
631-477-8309

There must be something very addictive about the restaurant business that makes successful restaurateurs want to expand their operations and take on even greater challenges. This is what Matt and Kim Murphy have done just four years after opening their widely acclaimed restaurant, Antares, in Greenport.

The Kitchen at Greenport is located just to the west of town in premises that had been a restaurant before Matt and Kim were offered the opportunity to take it over. They felt it was important not to try to replicate Antares but to provide a very different type of cuisine while still keeping the emphasis on freshness of local ingredients.

So that is why The Kitchen, now open for a year, has come to be a place to seek out some of the traditional favorites of America (as well as some other countries). The eye catching roadside sign offers "Comfort Food at its Finest" and a quick glance at the menu really whetted our appetites. Apart from the regular menu items, about four or five specials are offered every day by executive chef and partner Heather Souvenian, a graduate of the Culinary Institute who formerly cooked at The Ram's Head on Shelter Island.

We started with some exceptional Irish soda bread, made to Matt's grandfather's recipe, together with a glass of Chardonnay and Pinot Grigio and relaxed in the very pleasant dining room. Then came some very succulent sea fresh steamers, which set the stage for the first of the comfort foods. Now, fish and chips was an integral part of my English upbringing and I have eagerly sought it out across the world. Suffice it to say that Heather's beer battered cod served with excellent home-cut fries and a wonderful tangy tartar sauce has never been bettered in my judgment and I would travel the long road back to Greenport any time to indulge again in this delicacy. This night it was one of the specials but it really deserves to be a regular on the menu.

Comfort food from another ethnic background came in the shape of some excellent, tender kielbasa with sauerkraut. Heather told us that this was the first day that she had put this on the specials menu and already it was being very well received.

Now macaroni cheese, I suppose, would rank as one of the truly American comfort foods and Heather confirmed that they sell many portions of this dish every day. I hasten to say that this would not be my dish of choice but in the interests of our readers I did indulge and was very pleasantly surprised. The macaroni was perfectly cooked and the four-cheese sauce with a crispy topping gave the dish an intense but delicate flavor. You can choose ham, chicken or bacon to accompany the macaroni.

Each day, a fish of the day is featured and this night, blackened sea bass, served with perfect long grain Basmati rice, would have graced any of the specialty seafood restaurants on Long Island.

Apart from the dishes we sampled, our eyes were caught by others such as Sunday-style pot roast, Mom's meatloaf and barbecued ribs, so we knew there was much to entice us to return.

Desserts continued to put the taste buds on overload. The cheesecake made regularly by Kim's mother was irresistible and the chocolate macaroons will enthrall chocoholics.

To some, the words comfort food carry the connotation of heavy and high calorie. Here at The Kitchen, Heather is cooking comfort food that will make you reminisce about your childhood and youth and then, unless you were very fortunate, will make you wonder why your Mother didn't cook like Heather!

Matt, Kim and Heather have created a restaurant that is perfect for almost any occasion from a casual drop in meal to a birthday or other special occasion. The Kitchen is without any doubt another very good addition to the Greenport culinary scene.

Born in 1927, Peter Matthiessen dabbled in short stories as a teenager but got more serious at Yale. Shortly after graduation, he helped found the Paris Review. The year was 1950.

In the intervening decades, Matthiessen has published many volumes, both fiction and nonfiction, but is perhaps best known locally for Men's Lives: The Surfmén and Baymen of the South Fork. As for most writers, attention to detail is everything to him.

"E. M. Forster made that wonderful observation that good writing is administering a series of tiny astonishments," Matthiessen said during an interview a few years ago. "The astonishments aren't things you never knew. They are sort of the first articulation of something you knew but you'd never seen set down in print. And you read it and say, ah, yes! How true."

Wines We Love to Hate

First, it was Merlot. Here's a wine that has managed to exist, no, THRIVE, in France for hundreds of years, sought after by connoisseurs the world over and be, in the case of the top vintages of the great Chateaux, regarded with nothing short of awe.

But here on domestic soil, sometime during the late 90s, Americans started turning a jaundiced eye toward this noble grape that defines what many consider to be the greatest wine region of the world, Bordeaux. Food & Wine writer Kelly Alexander asked, "How did a wine become a symbol of the passé?" And even I wrote inquiringly in a column earlier this year: "Are we tired of the word, or the wine?"

True, in Bordeaux, Merlot is often used as a blending grape, along with Cabernet Sauvignon and Cabernet Franc, and even though Americans tend to equate purity with quality – think 100 percent Egyptian cotton and Ivory Soap – that still doesn't explain its fall from grace. Also, I can't figure out what's taken its place. We're not drinking less red wine, au contraire, what with all the newly discovered health benefits. Maybe it's just a candidate for LIFE-TIME TV's "Unsolved Mysteries." Whatever. But Raphael Vineyard's second label Merlot, the 2000 La Fontana – actually a meritage blend of Cab Franc, Merlot and Malbec – is as good a reason as any to buck this silly trend. The wine is voluptuous, with a long, satisfying finish and nice notes of spice and berries on the palate. Available at Murphy's Spirit Shoppe in Mattituck for $20.95, and worth every penny.

Even more disturbing than the Merlot dissing is the noise I've heard about another of the world's great grapes: Chardonnay. I know, I know, you think this is OLD news. Winemakers in the 80s, particularly in California, did go overboard with the oak, creating wines that overpowered a high-octane steak, let alone a fillet of Dover Sole.

But last summer in The New York Times I read that, based on the results of a major contest – the 2002 New York Food & Wine Classic – in which only 2 out of 17 entries qualified for the finals, that "some East End wineries might be positioning themselves to play into the mounting A.B.C. (Anything but Chardonnay) movement nationwide." I don't know about you, but to me this is NEWS.

The article continues: "Was it vintage? Style? Or yet another signal that fatigue with chardonnay, especially the oaky, buttery kind, is eroding interest in – perhaps creating hostility to – the grape and the wine. If so, is the public likely to follow suit sooner or later? Who knows?"

Good question, "Who knows?" But "creating hostility to?" I admit to being less than impressed with those over-oaked Chards myself, but I don't think I could ever summon an emotion as strong as hostility even for those and besides, the trend now on the North Fork is very definitely toward crisp, stainless-steel wines that go just fine with just about everything, from oysters to Chilean sea bass to sole, Dover or otherwise.

And speaking of Chardonnay, many of us have lost sight of the fact that ALL Chablis, those lovely white wines from northern Burgundy (NOT those tawdry, twist-top jug affairs from the West Coast that so unfortunately carry the illustrious name in vain on their labels), are made from 100 percent Chardonnay grapes. And, as anyone who's had a Les Clos Grand Cru Chablis knows, there is nary a wine on the planet that could be more perfect on the table than this dry, food-friendly white. It's true, I'll admit, that Chablis

Lust, Betrayal, And Death: Opera Of The Hamptons Returns To Borghese With A Vengeance

By Roy Bradbrook

Music and wine often seem almost inseparable, so it was appropriate that The Opera of the Hamptons opened its twelfth season in sparkling style at Castello di Borghese Vineyard with "A Night in Italy" program that encompassed both Mascagni's one act opera, Cavalleria Rusticana, and a selection of "Songs of Italy."

One of the advantages of holding such performances in Long Island's oldest vineyard, which is celebrating its 30th birthday this year, is the opportunity it gives, before the performance, to taste (and buy, of course) some of the estate's fine wines and to hear of the new releases. Marco Borghese brought out one of his first bottles of 2002 Riesling which, when it is released midsummer, will surely soon be sold out because there are only 400 cases of what promises to be a very drinkable light, summer wine. It is dry but with all of the fruit and aroma you would hope for in this often undervalued varietal. There will also be a very limited quantity of late harvest Riesling released mid-summer that will only be available at the winery. Another release to look forward to will be the 30th anniversary signature wine, a Meritage blend still undergoing its final blending.

But back to the opera. Most opera lovers when they think of Cavalleria Rusticana automatically couple it with I Pagliacci for the two seem as inseparable as wine and music in the repertoire of opera houses around the world. For this performance, though, Barbara Giancola, the artistic director of the company, and Atara Hazzan, the music director, allowed the sold out audience to enjoy Mascagni's masterpiece on its own. In just one act lasting just one hour, Mascagni compresses an incredible amount of primal passion. Sicilian lust, betrayal, anger, revenge and death against a background of the Easter Day celebrations in the village come crowding through a score of exquisite beauty. In a very intimate atmosphere, the audience really felt a part of the action and not mere spectators. James Marvel, the stage director, and stage manager Charles Bosselman demonstrated how to make full use of everything available to them. The realism of the settings, the movement of the singers – both onstage and in the center aisle, as the plot unfolded – added immeasurably to the sheer pleasure of hearing a cast comprised of voices that would grace any major opera house.

Maria Ciccaglione possesses an exceptional lyric soprano voice and has become a favorite with regular patrons following her portrayal of Mimi in La Boheme during the previous two seasons. In the leading role of Santuzza, a young girl seduced by Turridu, excommunicated from her church and spurned by almost everyone in the village, she brought a tenderness and devotion, especially in the wonderful passages of the Easter Hymn, as she proclaims the glories of the Resurrection. This is in direct contrast to her easily understood bitterness over her betrayal, which drives her to tell Alfio that Turridu has also seduced his wife, Lola. As already pointed out, this is a plot to rival any modern soap opera or even "The Sopranos"!

Wrath (continued from page 67)

Tenor Christian Sebek made his debut with the company in the role of Turridu and his strong enthralling voice and dramatic talent made this a debut to remember. Baritone Richard Hobson, a regular at the Metropolitan Opera and a performer with great stage presence and a wonderful voice, brought the requisite passion and intensity to the role of Alfio. As Lola, Alfio's wanton wife, Cheri Rose Katz also made her company debut. She coupled a versatile rich mezzo-soprano voice with looks that made you understand why Turridu was tempted and why her husband took his revenge on him. The final death of Turridu, off-stage at the hands of Alfio, presumably satisfies the ironic "Rustic Chivalry" of the title.

The role of Mamma Lucia, Turridu's mother and confidante of Santuzza, is a central role and Marlene Paul's elegant and warm mezzo voice brought realism and depth to the part.

After all of this drama and mayhem and an intermission that allowed some more tasting of Borghese wines, the second half of the program was much more circumspect as the artists demonstrated their versatility as they performed a wide variety of Italian songs, ranging from Mattinata and Core n'grato, sung eloquently by Christian Sebek, to the Cat duet where Cheri Rose Katz and Richard Hobson had the audience in fits of laughter as they playfully and erotically demonstrated how much can be put into the simple word, "Miaouw." Then, it finally was time to say goodbye as Maria Ciccaglione led the company in this song that has so rapidly become a favorite across the world.

Once again, Atarah Hazzan provided a wonderful musical accompaniment that included the wonderful "Intermezzo" in Cavalleria which must be one of the best-loved pieces in the whole spectrum of music.

Before the main performance, the audience also had the opportunity to hear Sara Murphy, the winner of this season's Franco Gentile Young Artists Program. Sara Murphy has an astoundingly dramatic soprano voice which will surely one day be heard in Wagnerian operas around the world.

As Barbara Giancola rightly pointed out, without the help and encouragement of true patrons of the arts, such as Marco and Ann Marie Borghese, as well as the ongoing support of the New York

State Council on the Arts and The Suffolk County Department of Economic Development, wonderful musical evenings such as this, where world class voices can be enjoyed, would be difficult and even impossible to stage here on eastern Long Island.

The Opera of the Hamptons' next production will be La Traviata, performed at the Hampton Day School in Bridgehampton on Saturday June 28.

For tickets or information regarding La Traviata, call the Hampton School at 631-537-1240. Tickets are $40 in advance, $50 at the door, $100 for preferred seating and cocktail reception at 5 p.m. Opera begins at 6 p.m.

may be the ultimate Chardonnay, and maybe it doesn't bear comparison to our young region's efforts and style, but I still defend the grape against even domestic hostility.

Wine critic Daniel Rogov writes that "because of their increasing world-wide popularity, wine stores around the world now maintain a supply of Chardonnay wines from places such as Australia, Chile, California and Italy." And now, more and more, from the Wine Country of Long Island.

So there you have it. There are always two sides to every story. And if it's true that A.B.C. is indeed becoming a nationwide movement, I think I'll start a little regional one right here in Cutchogue. I'm going to call it L.G.L.C., for Lenz Gold Label Chardonnay, one the North Fork's premiere Chards.

And though I doubt that this wine will be entered in this year's N.Y. Food & Wine Classic, I'll bet it takes center stage at the 14th Annual Chardonnay World Classic (coming up on July 26) held at Lenz every year. Over 60 Chards from around the world will be available for tasting at this fabulous event, providing the perfect antidote to the A.B.C. movement. Thankfully, some things, if not never, at least change slowly.

A Rose By Any Other Name? Rosé, Of Course

"A bottle of wine was good company," wrote Ernest Hemingway in The Sun Also Rises. And one of his favorite afternoon quaffs, based on several scenes in his novels, was the famous Cotes du Rhone Tavel Rosé.

Local rosés, delightfully dry and summer fare-friendly, continue to satisfy my yearning for that Tavel style, but perhaps none more so than Corey Creek's 2001 Domaine CC Rosé. A beautiful coral color, the carefully crafted wine, made from 100 percent Pinot Noir, is perfect with picnic fare and truly exemplifies the trend toward dry, fruity rosés. Another infinitely drinkable though distinctly different local pink is Peconic

Bay's Rosé of Merlot, which retains traditional Merlot traits, such as soft tannins and upfront fruit.

And coming soon: review of Macari Vineyard's 2002 Rosé d'une Nuit. Whatever you do, do NOT confuse these lovelies with that blush wine, White Zinfandel, which is neither white nor characteristic of the wonderful red Zins of California.

Galluccio Estate's 2000 Cru George Allaire Chardonnay received a whopping rating of 90 from Wine Spectator magazine.

"My favorite, Chardonnay is atypical for the region: Galluccio Estate's Cru George Allaire 2000 succeeds in a full-blown style, full-bodied and lush with oak and tropical fruit," wrote Thomas Matthews.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

LIGHT IS THE THING AT GALERIE PELAR

Everyone knows that light is what drives an artist, and its significance as an aesthetic element can never be overstated. Likewise, the East End's penchant for light can never be emphasized enough.

Greenport's Galerie Pelar currently celebrates illumination in various ways, but most intriguing is its work from St. Ives, England, a place similar to our local area and one that this critic knows fairly well. Not only is Cornwall, with its sea and sun, geographically similar to the Hamptons, but it provided the backdrop for the English abstract expressionists, like Ben Nicholson Dame Barbara Hepworth, Robert Herron and Sir Terry Frost.

The new generation from St. Ives and its environs inherits both the love of light and a respect for abstraction, determined, we believe, by its physical location. Simon Allen's sculptures are good examples, recalling Brancusi's pure form and Mr. Allen's belief that his works "have a life of their own." Much of that "life" derives from the artist's use of light, a reflecting element that gets its energy from a particular piece's surroundings. Mr. Allen's shapes catch light as the sea similarly does.

Bob Devereux's abstractions also signify his love of the sea and light, deriving, if memory serves correctly, from his early days working at the beach. It's no wonder, then, that his paintings resemble beach chairs, their characteristic stripes becoming a signature of sorts. Moreover, there's a lyric flow to his forms reflecting his career as a composer and poet alike. (His poetry is filled with references to the landscape and the sea.)

A particular "gem" is a 1921 painting by Ben Nicholson called "Lugano Landscape," a small work featuring an Italian locale that recalls his later St. Ives rooftops. We revel in the setting's swoops, dips, and, of course, light.

There are other illumination examples not originating from St. Ives, however; they certainly invite appreciation as well: various Murano glass sculptures from Italy, both playful and serious; and Sara D'Alessandro outdoor sculptures, often surreal configurations which pick up the setting's natural light.

Light is not what we notice first about Stephen Clutterbuck's or Olinka Broadfoot's sculptures, however. It is only after we ponder their linear shapes (Broadfoot's "Sourozenci") and/or metaphysical meaning that we see form and light becoming one.

The current show will be on view until July 27.

HONORING THE ARTIST: DINAH MAXWELL SMITH

This week's cover by Southampton resident Dinah Maxwell Smith proves that you can, indeed, go home again. The painting, "Two Bathers" recalls Ms. Smith's childhood days in Northport where she spent her summers amidst the countryside and the sea.

While these years represent a glorious time which Ms. Smith continually celebrates in her beach scenes and her memories, she has never literally gone back to visit her old home – even though she has lived here for twenty-six years. "I don't go back," she says simply. "I don't want to see how things have changed."

But that doesn't mean Ms. Smith never goes back to other places where she's resided. Take Montana, for example. "I lived there when I was fourteen, and I returned when I was sixteen," she offers.

"I wanted to see what the women were doing in Montana on the ranches. They were all in the kitchen. 'I don't want to do this,' I said to myself. So I left. I didn't return until very recently." (This past November, she visited the University of Montana and is considering a possible adjunct position there where the landscape is "drop dead gorgeous.")

For Ms. Smith, "going back" doesn't always refer to a physical return, however. "I want to go back to the things I always wanted," she explains. Like owning and caring for pets, which was a major part of her childhood experiences. Presently, she has four indoor cats, a poodle and a new puppy, Scamper. He's a Rhodesian Ridgeback, "thinner than a lab and a breed that tracks lions."

Asked what she'd like next, Ms. Smith replies without hesitation, "an Irish Wolfhound."

Not as exotic perhaps is the horse the artist recently acquired, another reminder of her childhood. "I was working with a trainer and a horse, but I decided you have to have your own horse."

When asked where she might like to eventually live, Ms. Smith has obviously considered the options. "Rhode Island" she remarks without question.

"There's space there, it has an ocean, and Providence is being preserved; it also has culture."

She continues: "I don't like the fact that the East End is no longer rural. Every time you turn around, there's a pile of dirt, a large house going up on a small plot. But I don't want to live in a place where I feel isolated, where I feel like an alien."

Ms. Smith will never feel like an alien as long as she believes that she can go home again, that she will always be able to take her "roots" with her.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

theater review: bacchanalia and the lover

Bay Street Theatre's second mainstage production, two one-act plays about truth and deception in love and marriage, are written by two masterful 20th century playwrights. The curtain-raiser is Arthur Schnitzler's Bacchanalia and the second act is Harold Pinter's The Lover. Viewed at the final preview performance, these are two tart, tasty summer souffles.

Arthur Schnitzler (1862-1931) was an Austrian playwright, novelist, critic and a good friend of his contemporary Sigmund Freud. He was also one of the first playwrights to show his characters' underlying psychological motivations. Schnitzler is best-known to American audiences for his play La Ronde, which contemporary playwright David Hare updated as The Blue Room on Broadway a few seasons ago (starring Nicole Kidman), and for Traumnovelle which Stanley Kubrick cinematized into Eyes Wide Shut.

Bacchanalia is a witty exercise concerning a famous writer (Felix Staufner, commandingly played by John Glover) who leaves his young, attractive wife at their summer resort home for several weeks while he goes off to immerse himself in finishing a writing project. Sally Murphy is Agnes, the abandoned and neglected wife, who drifts into a relationship with a man closer to her age, Dr. Guido Wernig. The play begins at the Salzburg railroad station in the early 1900s just as Felix is due to arrive.

Felix immediately assesses the emotional situation and takes complete control: "Genuine passion deserves everything and excuses everything," he states – then quickly does an about-face and says he must insult his young wife to feel secure about her loyalty. His telling remark: "I will never trust you even though I love you."

He explains the ancient custom of bacchanalia to the two younger lovers – one night of passion between any two people, married or not, who part in the morning with no acknowledgement that anything has ever happened between them – with one exception. And so their little dance-for-three begins.

Harold Pinter begins his dance-for-two (or three!) with the husband Richard remarking at the beginning of The Lover, "Frankness is necessary in marriage." Writing at least fifty years after Bacchanalia, Pinter's playlet takes on the same theme of the hidden dynamics between two people in a longterm love relationship. His duo are two sophisticates living in a toney London suburb (Windsor).

Pinter uses the same tools as Schnitzler – psychological game-playing and word-play – but we are now in the late-20th century world of "open" marriage. John Glover is, once again, a witty and compelling presence as the husband. Sally Murphy, as his wife Sarah, is playfully coquettish and duplicitous and...

There are two additional actors in these plays with quieter supporting roles. Ted Schneider plays the earnest young lover, Dr. Guido Wernig, in Bacchanalia with a refined naivete. He also briefly appears as the milkman in The Lover. John Beuscher plays the modest, accommodating waiter at the train station cafe in Bacchanalia.

Daniel Gerroll directs these two forays into the mysteries of marriage with a light, deft hand. Klara Zieglerova's sets and Michale Krass's costumes provide key clues to the characters' personalities and the era of each play. Eric Schlobohm lights the actors and sets with his usual finesse, aided by Tony Melfa's sound design and Gary Hygom's production managing.

—Jan Silver

Take Five 2003 with Jan Silver

This week overflows with good theater and music, interesting speakers and a staggering range of entertaining benefits. On East End stages this week: Broadway actors in Pinter's The Lover and Schnitzler's Bacchanalia in Sag Harbor; the musical Best Little Whorehouse in Texas at Southampton College; Cole Porter's classic Kiss Me Kate in Bellport, and the drama Agnes of God in Riverhead. The Monty Alexander Trio play acoustic jazz and reggae Saturday in Westhampton Beach, and East Hampton's Guild Hall features popular local performers in concert this weekend. Music Festival of the Hamptons presents "From Joplin to Bernstein," Saturday in East Hampton, and the Perlman Music Program opens on Shelter Island.

As for this weekend's monumental line-up of benefits – they're all on Saturday: Jazz @ Jennings (for Bridgehampton Child Care & Recreational Center); "Long Day's Night" (Turkish food, entertainment & bazaar for LongHouse Reserve); "Barbecue & Beyond" with Al Roker and other celebrity chefs (for Maryhaven Center of Hope); tour of Sag Harbor's "Hidden Gardens" (for Old Whaler's Church); "Love Heals" party at Luna Farm (for Alison Gertz AIDS Foundation); "Sea Dreams" dinner dance (South Fork Natural History Museum); "Summer Solstice" auction (for Madoo Conservancy). There's much more, so read on for details:

THEATER

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre just opened its second summer production, two one-acters about truth and deception in love and marriage. Harold Pinter's The Lover and Arthur Schnitzler's Bacchanalia, with a Broadway cast, play Tuesday through Sunday evenings plus some late-afternoon performances. Call the box office at 631-725-9500 for tickets ($38-42) or order online at www.baystreet.org.

Amagansett's cozy Stephen Talkhouse club is presenting some comedic theater this season. Lisa Levy brings in her 'reality' show "Psychotherapy Live" this Saturday, 8 p.m. ($10; call 631-267-3117). This is the last weekend to see Southampton Players' joyous production of the musical Best Little Whorehouse in Texas (at Southampton College's Avram Theater, Friday through Sunday; call 631-287-8899 for tickets). Bellport's Gateway Playhouse has Kiss Me Kate onstage now (631-286-1133), and the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall in Riverhead has the drama Agnes of God (631-369-4661).

SPEAKERS

Accomplished novelist Tom Wolfe will speak about "Who Was Hot and Who Was Not" during the Gilded Age (1890s-1920s) at Southampton's Parrish Art Museum, 5 p.m. Saturday ($5 members, $15 guests). On Tuesday at 11 a.m., the Parrish, the Rogers Memorial Library and the Southampton Historical Museum co-sponsor a talk by Parrish curator Alicia Longwell and Historical Museum director Richard Barrons on the current St. Gaudens exhibit and Southampton's "Gilded Age" estate homes (at the Parrish Museum—bring a bag lunch, dessert & coffee will be served; no admission charge).

The Southampton Library opens its new Rose Garden with a celebration Saturday, 2-4 p.m., and playwright Joe Pintauro talks about "Love in a time of war" including writers Simone deBeauvoir, Albert Camus, Jean Paul Sartre and Nelson Algren on Monday, 7 p.m., in the Morris Meeting Room (no admission charge; call 631-283-0774 ext 523 to reserve a seat).

At a local bookshop this weekend (free admission) novelist Mary Jane Meaker reads from her new memoir about her affair with author Patricia Highsmith on Saturday, 6 p.m., at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor.

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

American crafts guru Jack Lenor Larsen created the unique East Hampton home/garden environment, LongHouse Reserve. It is open to the public for special events and weekly summer hours. To celebrate the longest day of this year, LongHouse is holding "A Moveable Ottoman Feast" Saturday starting at 6 p.m. There will be a bazaar of Turkish items for sale, a silent auction of outstanding crafts, a buffet of Turkish foods and drinks, belly dancing, fortune telling, ongoing performances of "Apparitions" by Oddfellows Playhouse members and a concert by Persian diva Sussan Deyhim at 9 p.m. Benefit tickets are $275 for adults, $75 for children 5 to 16; call LongHouse at 631-329-3568 or e-mail joanne@longhouse.org for tickets.

NBC television personality (and noted barbecue cook) Al Roker tops the list of celebrity chefs (including Bobby Flay, David Rosenbarten, Jerry Della Femina, Rick Moonen, Waldy Malouf) at Saturday's "Barbecue & Beyond" to benefit for Maryhaven Center for Hope, a nonprofit, nonsectarian agency serving the disabled on the East End. The party runs from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Villa Maria, Water Mill, and is limited to 350 guests at $250 each; call 631-329-5480 for tickets.

Peter and Kayce Jennings have opened their home to great jazz musicians for the "Jazz @ Jennings" jam for several years. A benefit for the Bridgehampton Child Care & Recreation Center, this year's jam headliners are pianist Kenny Barron and drummer Roy Haynes. Other jazz greats will join them. The evening starts at 6:30 p.m. with drinks, then dinner, and music at 9 p.m. ($1500 per person; call 631-537-0616).

The South Fork Natural History Museum holds its "Sea Dreams"-themed dinner dance to preview its new center on the Sag Harbor/Bridgehampton Turnpike this Saturday from 6:30 p.m. (great dance music with the Lone Sharks' band). Attendees are asked to wear blue and/or green; call 631-537-9735 for tickets.

We are just entering the peak blooming season for East End gardens. Robert Dash's Madoo Conservancy, Sagaponack, has a special "Summer Solstice Auction" of unique items this Saturday; call Madoo at 631-537-8200 for more information. The Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons (ARF) has its self-guided tour of selected Southampton gardens on Saturday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. (call 631-537-0400 for tickets). And Sag Harbor's annual "Tour of Hidden Gardens" to benefit the Old Whaler's Church is Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., rain or shine ($25; call 631-725-5949 or 631-287-8276).

The Allison Gertz Foundation for AIDS Education holds its annual "Love Heals" party at Luna Farm, Sagaponack, this Saturday from 7:30 to 11 p.m.; call 917-351-8100 for information.

PBS Of The Funky Meters: Still Havin' Fun

Between them, George Porter Jr., David Russell Batiste and Brian Stoltz, of PBS have more than a hundred years experience on stage in front of crowds. It's been a long strange trip, but they're still drawing crowds and playing the funk that has been their hallmark sound since the '60s. As the East End slides into summer, music fans have a show to look forward to this weekend as PBS makes an appearance at The Farmhouse on Saturday night to play a benefit show for The Walt Frazier Youth Foundation.

After a 1,182 mile from down South to Nantucket, George Porter took a few minutes to talk to Dan's Papers and give us a glimpse at what's to come.

Dan's Papers: Have you ever been out to the Hamptons before?

George Porter: Yeah, I've played out there with the Funky Meters before at the Talkhouse. It was pretty cool, but expensive and we didn't have hotel rooms so we didn't really get a chance to get a lay of the land around there. That happens a lot. You pull up someplace, unload, play the show, load in again and then you're on the road to the next show. It can be pretty tough.

DP: You've been doing that for a lot of years though.

GP: Yeah, and I'm not doing it for the money, that's for sure. I do it for the love of the music, and we're all old players, but we haven't been together for that whole time so we're having a good time playing together.

DP: What have you guys been playing?

GP: We're doing some new music that we wrote for the band, we're playing some older Funky Meters stuff and we'll do some covers too. We'll do "It's Your Thing" every once in awhile, "Let the Good Times Roll," some Hendrix covers, and just throw in things that are fun and will get the crowd going. And we do great solos, Russell will give a drum "clinic" as we call it, and we just jam. The crowd can always tell when you're having fun on stage and they'll respond to that. It's a fun show.

DP: What's the best question you've been asked recently?

GP: Are you still having fun? That was the best and, yeah, I'm still having a great time. It's still a good time and I just want to keep doing this.

DP: What's the plan for the rest of the day in Nantucket?

GP: I'm going to sleep. We've been on the road since yesterday and we just got to the hotel, so I'm gonna get some sleep.

PBS will be performing at the Farmhouse Restaurant at 341 Montauk Highway in East Hampton at 9 p.m. on Saturday night. The event benefits The Walt Frazier Youth Foundation and tickets can be purchased in advance at jambasetickets.com

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood 1n The Hamptons

I beg of thee, O Mighty Queen of the Motion Picture. Please give 2 tickets to Palookaville to the too, too tawdry makers of 2 Fast 2 Furious. And, make them ONE WAY! Though, for sure, these guys will easily come back the wrong way. I can't believe I miss the fewer moving parts of the Diesel (Vin) driven, The Fast and the Furious, directed by Rob Cohen who gave outlaw street-racing real ZIP. The sequel, 2F2F, runs on the worst kind of combustible gas: the kind that's made up of fumes from enamel paint, glistening car and human bodies and, sun tan lotion. You can add car wax since the autos upstage the human stars, who also had a lot of waxing. Industrial strength Vin Diesel (now owner of the XXX franchise) is replaced by singer/model, Tyrese, slickly black with the whitest gleam off his teeth, as an ex-con with a light touch on the steering wheel and, the heaviest foot on the gas pedal and acting. I really miss Michelle Rodriguez (Girlfight) and her flammable mix. In her place is Eva Mendes, with iron pumped buns worthy of female prerequisites for weekend warriors in pursuit of Speed. Ms. Mendes is an uncovered but, not naked, undercover agent playing house with Cole Hauser's very bad guy, to catch him moving drugs by way of street racers – of all things! And, in vice-nice Miami.

Whale Rider & 2 Fast 2 Furious

You're not expected to believe any of this hi octane-low grade movie. Least of all, its star, Paul (cute blond cop) Walker, who couldn't be helped by nitrogen-powered booster rockets. When he and Tyrese aren't behind the wheel, the movie grinds its gears laboriously. If you have an automotive bent, the cars do give high performance. If you find stick shifts sticky, you may feel as if you've had a fender-bender in the King Kullen parking area.

For fans of "The Man Show" or Howard Stern or Imus – let go of your gear sticks and, hit the clutch as I recommend a crowd-pleasing film about Girl Power. Actually, you can relax because young girls are generally permitted acts of courage and, other freedoms disallowed when they become women and, therefore, threatening. And, so, many fine movies have been made. This one, Whale Rider, is one of the best. A contemporary fable set in New Zealand, of a Maori girl who wants to assume leadership of her tribe, usually passed from male chief to the eldest son. Complications upon complications abound for the ambitious girl and, as portrayed by a fabulously gifted 12 year old, Keisha Castle-Hughes, in a truly fascinating depiction of a cultural heritage that demands preservation. That is a must see. Even the most hardened, seen-them-all, chick-flick skeptics will be carried away by the powerful surf of lingering truths.

O powerful Queen of Movies, you have bestowed many film festival awards on Whale Rider's director, Niki Caro and it's star. Now give them tickets to great success – with integrity.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The green shelled garden pea is just one of a variety of edible peas that are literally here today and gone tomorrow. The vegetable needs warmth but not heat and so it's tiny time frame is late spring to early summer. An ancient vegetable, it is known to have existed in the form of seeds since 5000 BC. Green peas eaten fresh were a later variety and in 17th-century France peas were refined into the most desirable kind we have today, the tender sweet petit pois.

Today in the United States most of the pea crop is canned or frozen and for some inexplicable reason one of the least objectionable in either state. Yet they do not remotely compare to freshly picked young green peas.

One of my young grandsons who will eat little more than cheese and pasta has a particular fondness for peas. When visiting some months ago he asked if we could cook a sweet pea recipe with mint from Sheila Lukens (The Silver Palate) U.S.A. Cookbook – a recipe he made with his mother at home. While I had to resort to the petit pois in my freezer, we picked the fresh mint leaves peeking out of the ground. A favorite recipe of Thomas Jefferson – I have great hopes for this boy.

When Perry De Lallo Sr. of Southampton chatted about risi e bisi, a centuries old Italian spring pea and rice soup, I listened. This happy combination of rice and peas is a recipe that I have long wanted to prepare, and it is delicious. Bright green and crisp fresh peas should be at your farmers markets during this brief window of time.

SHEILA LUKINS MINTY SWEET PEAS

The most delectable, tender fresh peas will be found in late spring. Frozen petit pois will do the job nicely if craved for any other time of the year.

Serves 4

1/2 teaspoon sugar
2 cups shelled fresh peas (2 pounds unshelled)
2 tablespoons sweet butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint leaves

1. Fill a small saucepan with lightly salted water to a depth of 1/2 inch. Bring to a boil, and add the sugar and the peas. Reduce the heat to low, cover, and simmer until the peas are bright green and tender, 5-10 minutes, depending on size. Drain and place in a serving bowl.

2. Toss the peas with the butter, salt, pepper and chopped mint. Serve immediately.

Reprinted from Sheila Lukins U.S.A. Cookbook, Workman Publishing.

RISI E BISI

A happy combination of rice and peas combine to make a traditional Italian soup
Serves 4-6

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 medium yellow onion, finely chopped
1/4 pound pancetta, thinly sliced
1/2 cup short or medium grain rice
1/2 cup dry white wine, optional
6-7 cups chicken stock or low-sodium broth
1 1/2 cups shelled fresh peas or 1 10-oz. package frozen sweet peas

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Freshly grated nutmeg

1 Melt butter with oil in a 4-5 quart saucepan and add the onions. Saute for 4-5 minutes, stirring occasionally until onions are translucent. Meanwhile stack pancetta slices and cut into small dice. Add to the onions in the saucepan and saute for several minutes to crisp the pancetta slightly. Add the rice and stir to coat. Pour in the wine, if using, and simmer briskly until liquid evaporates. Add the broth; bring to a boil over high heat then adjust to a simmer. Season to taste with salt and pepper. If using canned broth taste for salt before adding.

2. Simmer the soup for 12-15 minutes until rice is barely cooked then add the peas. Cook for 5-10 minutes longer or until peas are tender. Season with nutmeg and serve hot.

Dining In The Hamptons

The 14th annual Taste of the Hamptons will be held on Saturday June 28 at the Wölffer Estate in Sagaponack. Brought to you by the Family Service League, the gala of local wine and cuisine will host over 45 wineries, restaurants, and food and beverage purveyors from all over the East End. This year's event will honor community leader Linda Cohen Wassong. Call (631) 427-3700 x 255 for tickets or for more info. Sponsors are Prudential Long Island Realty and Del Laboratories. Tickets for the event are $150 in advance, or $175 if purchased on the day of the event. Taste of the Hamptons always proves to be an exciting night for all who attend, so don't miss out!

Entertaining this summer? Citarella in the Hamptons offers complete catering service including food, staffing, rental supplies, party spaces and planning. Citarella can provide catering for ten people — or hundreds. Their catering menu includes an array of party platters, hors d'oeuvres, salads, main dishes, sides and desserts. Here is a sampling: Enchilada corn cups, lobster tartlets, hot and spicy spring rolls, shrimp with mango salsa, beef Bourguignon, whole poached salmon, risotto primavera, cannelloni, pasta with arugula and tomatoes, vegetable lasagna, sushi platter, smoked fish platter, or try some desserts including the chocolate-dipped strawberries platter and mini-pastry tray. For further information, contact Citarella in East Hampton (324-9190) or Watermill (726-3636) or visit www.citarella.com.

It's that time of the year folks! The time when more and more restaurants are extending their hours to accommodate the droves of hungry pleasure seekers vacationing in the Hamptons. For starters, George Martin will now be open seven nights a week at 5:30 p.m. They will also serve late until midnight on Friday and Saturday nights. A three-course prix fixe is available for $22.95 Sunday through Thursday. For further information contact George Martin at 204-8700.

Like wise, Turtle Crossing (324-7166) is now serving dinner seven nights a week beginning at 5 p.m. with lunch being served on weekends, Saturday and Sunday at noon. Happy hour is offered every Friday night from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. at their bar. Draught beers are 2 for 1 and complimentary appetizers are served with Mama Lee & Friends providing live musical entertainment.

All you night owls partying till dawn at Sag Harbor's Rocco's a la Playa should remember that the popular weekend hotspot is also a restaurant serving dinner Thursday through Sunday. An early bird special is available Fridays 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and a sunset menu is served Saturdays and NBC's Matt Lauer, Annette Roque and their baby boy were seen grabbing milk and prepared food at Citarella's Water Mill store last week... Co-stars of the as-yet unnamed film currently filming in the Hamptons Keanu Reeves and Amanda Peet were seen dining last week at The Plaza Café in Southampton. Peet sampled chef Doug Gulija's spring pea soup and Atlantic salmon while Keanu had the day boat scallops and the herb crusted rack of lamb. They shared a bottle of 1997 Opus One and finished the meal with cherries three ways and a chocolate parfait. They were later joined by the director, Nancy Meyers.

HOME GROWN WITH BRIAN HALWEIL

Southampton and Shellfish Reach Tentative Peace Agreement

According to a 19th century map of Long Island that hangs in Bruno Demetrio's hallway, there should be oysters in the section of the Peconic Bay that laps up to his Noyac home. But the hurricane of '38, increasing pollution, the brown tides of the '80s, and a range of other factors transformed the bay, and there haven't been major shellfish beds in these waters for decades.

Until now.

The town of Southampton will allow Bruno and a handful of other pioneers to grow oysters, clams, and scallops in cages on their property on a trial basis, as part of a shellfish gardening program run by Cornell University's Marine Center in Southold. The three-year-old program called SPAT (which stands for Southold Project in Aquaculture Training, and is also the term for young bivalves) has grown to include over 200 participants in 41 different Long Island townships. Shellfish gardeners span both forks and both ends of the island from Manhattan – there's one full-time urbanite who travels to Southold to tend his flock – to Montauk and Orient Point.

Along with a similar effort in the Chesapeake Bay, the SPAT program is one of only a few in the nation to involve average people in restoring wild shellfish populations.

Bruno doesn't think of himself as a pioneer, at least with respect to shellfish. During the week, he's one of New York's top hair stylists at Frederic Fekkai in Manhattan. "I heard about this program, and I knew I had to do it," says Bruno, a self-proclaimed shellfish connoisseur.

You can almost hear Bruno salivate on a recent morning, when Kim Tetrault, a marine scientist who coordinates and founded the SPAT program, arrives to inspect the site and get Bruno started. "I can get you oyster spat by next week," Kim says, seductively cradling a few adults left over from his Memorial Day barbecue. Bruno's eyes light up: "Those are the perfect size for eating." They peer inside the scallop shells to see the yellowish-green row clinging to the body, and Bruno starts raving about this custardy, culinary delight.

Over the last few months, Kim has worked with the Southampton town trustees, who were initially wary of the SPAT program. "The trustees have basically been cautious of how they were going to allow private individuals use bottom rights, something that is in the public domain," Kim says.

Bruno's garden set-up is a bit more complicated than most since he has no dock access. "The easiest place to grow shellfish is on docks," Kim notes. Cultivating mollusks with no attachment is trickier because one needs to simulate stability.

Kim isn't daunted. He has come up with a plan to sink several temporary screw anchors into the bay floor and use them to secure the black, plastic cages which serve as a growing medium for the shellfish spat. Every few weeks, Bruno, along with two neighbors who will share the responsibility, will need to check for algae, barnacles, sea squirts, crabs or anything else that might fowl the cages. By fall, Bruno should be harvesting his first crop, and throwing his first oyster parties.

"Aquaculture is based on flow," Kim explains, sounding a bit like a yoga instructor. The current baths and nourishes the shellfish with algae-rich water. And the Peconic Bay yields internationally renowned shellfish.

SPAT participants keep half of their harvest and return the other half to the marine center to help build wild populations in eastern Long Island. Shellfish form a building block of the marine environment: they are food for fish and crabs and improve water quality by removing excess nutrients and pollutants. "Mollusks form a perfect filtration system that mankind could never replicate," Kim marvels.

For a $250 annual fee, you get equipment, spat, and unlimited access to an entire year of training in the nuances of shellfish gardening. Kim offers hands-on classes every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday (and some weekends) at the marine center.

This tax-deductible fee is really a steal, since the market value of a good haul of shellfish could easily exceed $600. (It's not unusual for first-timers to harvest 1000 oysters, which cost $8 a dozen.) "And no other program lets you keep your crop or gives you the on-going support," Kim says. Members have started an "ambassador assistance" hotline for urgent questions, and a SPAT mobile is dispatched for emergencies.

You don't even need to be blessed with waterfront property. The marine center has plots available in Southold, and interested individuals in Southampton or elsewhere should contact Kim at 631-852-8660.

Bruno's wife, Gisella, watches this whole affair from her flower garden and points to another significant benefit. The shellfish are at least one crop the deer won't get.

A summer passing by in Montauk without enjoying a meal at the restaurant on Gosman's Dock is a cardinal sin. Located on the northern shores of Montauk Harbor, Gosman's Dock rests comfortably on the water just across from the golden sands and leafy green trees on the opposite side of the channel. You can sit outside or inside. Either way, you are the first to see the passing ships as they come in from a day of fishing and fun, or are on their way out.

It was a Saturday afternoon, luckily before the rain came, when I arrived at the restaurant with my friend Judy. Looking around, I noticed two teenage couples on a double date, a married couple wearing the fun lobster bibs provided by their server, and a quintet of women enjoying an afternoon gathering. Everyone was smiling, even those who were not yet eating. Maybe it is the fresh air tickling your nose, the lapping of the water against the docks, the seagulls accompanying you while perched near your table, or many other fine aspects of the atmosphere.

Laura was our waitress, and she could not have been any kinder or more informative. While awaiting our appetizers, Judy enjoyed a glass of Pinot Grigio and I sipped a glass of Chardonnay while we split the basket of fresh bread and seasoned bread wafers. Gosman's offers red and white wines from as near as the North Fork and from as far as Italy.

For appetizers, we had enjoyed batter dipped fried calamari with a zesty marinara sauce and a cilantro ginger sauce, and a dish of blackened rare tuna sashimi with pickled cabbage slaw, wasabi, pickled ginger and soy sauce. Unlike the hard and crusty calamari you find elsewhere, Gosman's dish is incredibly soft and is bursting with flavor. The cilantro ginger sauce was a rare delight, giving you two different ways to enhance the flavor. Meanwhile, the sashimi was just as excellent. The fish was caught that day fresh, brought to the dock moments before I arrived, and then placed conveniently on the plate before me. Raw or cooked, Gosman's knows how to make a fish dish.

That's why fish fans will love Gosman's appetizers. Lobster bisque, Manhattan and New England clam chowder, New England crabcakes with plum tomato aioli, and the Clams Casino, which are top neck clams with garlic and green bell pepper stuffing and crispy bacon, are all succulent seafood dishes.

After the appetizers quickly vanished, our entrees arrived. Choosing from the menu was not an easy task. Gosman's has a variety of unique fish dishes. The yellowtail flounder served with fresh herbs and a beurre blanc sauce, the grilled tuna steak marinated in olive oil with basil fresh herbs and a soy sauce, and the blackened catch of the day served with Cajun spices and a citrus sauce are all mouthwatering delights. In addition, the menu also offers enticing treats like a New York strip steak, center cut pork chops, aged prime rib of beef, and a French style breast of chicken. All entrees come with either a rice pilaf or parsley boiled potatoes.

One of the specials of the day was a King salmon dish, and I could not refuse. Judy, meanwhile, enjoyed the shore dinner - which came with a steamed chix lobster, yellowtail flounder, a baked clam, corn on the cob, and boiled potatoes. The grilled salmon was smothered in a buttery and creamy sauce that intensified the already rich flavor of the fish. I would love to describe how great it was in detail, but the fact remains that the dish was clean within moments. The salmon melted in my mouth, and was incredible when taken with small sips of Chardonnay. As for the shore dinner, the generous serving of lobster was the tastiest on the East End. The yellow flounder's crispy and satisfying outside blended well with the warm and tender meat beneath it. And, of course, the baked clam tantalized our taste buds. When we first looked at these dishes, we were afraid that we would not be able to finish them. By the time we were done, we yearned for more.

With room for dessert, Judy ordered a crème brulee and I opted for the Oreo cheesecake. The creamy custard, beneath a buttery and crisp top, made for a delicious crème brulee. Meanwhile, the rich flavor of the Oreo cheesecake made for the perfect conclusion to my meal. When the meal was done, we were still filled with smiles. It was the perfect way to spend a sunny afternoon. After looking at the grins on the faces at many other tables, it appears as if many others felt the same way.

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

This weekend was a goodie...The weather was great and I managed to get lot's done in the garden and shopping was resourceful. Let's shop!

I started out this weekend at Hampton Nursery and Landscapes on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays for some plants for my garden. Drive by and you will see their display of perennial of the week and sales promotions, bet you're sure to stop and shop here. Each week they feature something different, colorful and flowering. Hampton Nursery has also won the Hampton Bays Beautification Award for their outstanding contribution towards progress and beautification in Hampton Bays and beyond. Stop in and check on their expertise on design plan for you home or give a call at 728-1160.

Donna Parker Antiques on Montauk Highway in Water Mill has just received a brand new shipment of fabulous merchandise. If you missed out, now is the time to catch the worm...Get there early.

Verizon Wireless at the Bridgehampton Commons has a deal of all deals going on. Buy one phone, get one free at $49.99 and tons of minutes for $39.99 a month. Stop in and check it out.

Bridgehampton Village's, Main Street has a ton of shops with so much to offer. There's plenty of parking, park the car and take a stroll and you will see what I mean. Native Accents Gallery has hidden treasure that represent Zimbabwe's leading stone sculptures, authentic tribal artifacts, and hand woven Zulu baskets. The Design Studio offers inspiration from nature that creates a peaceful, serene environment not without an adventurer's passion for combining world-class artistry and craftsmanship. The Dalston Studio presents a refreshing collection of creative gifts and inspired home accents with a dash of select antiques, florals pictures, lamps, decorative accessories and accent furniture. Ah...Gloriosos, has a large selection of Americana pottery, women's clothing, baby clothing, gifts and accessories and handcrafted giftware to choose from. This is a great little shop, so don't pass it by. At Penny Whistle Toys you will be surprised to find a shop full of goodies...Toys, gymnastic balls, sand toys, pool floats and games, party favors, art supplies, baby toys and so much more. Stop in and make a wish...Here's a shop you should not miss out on, Alice B. King Fine Stationery and Gifts. There is a wonderful supply of custom and boxed invitations, stationery, agendas, and guest books, address books, pens, journals and so much more. Bridgehampton Village shopping to be continued....

Have you been to Treasure Island in the Wainscott Village on Montauk Highway, East Hampton yet? Here they have a tremendous selection of outdoor furniture, many of which are exclusive to Treasure Island. Look for beautiful cast aluminum, all weather, wicker, classic wrought iron, teak and they carry a full line of accessories, hammocks, cushions and furniture covers at affordable prices.

At the Red Horse Plaza on Montauk Highway in East Hampton The Down Factory Store at the Elegant John has it all! They guarantee you the lowest prices in the country as well as the Hamptons. My choice was the king-size feather bed, that is the heaviest in the country. No kidding! After a days work at Dan's and the shopping trips, let me tell you, I sleep like a log...No kidding! Give Frank and Richard a call at 631-324-2636 and tell them I sent you...

Time to run and get going to prepare for a visit from old friends, Barbara and Bobby this weekend. Now let's see...what shall we do? Maybe some shopping!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Shopping.

know of anyone that sells this merchandise and monograms also? R.T. -- Oakdale

A. After a little research in your area I found a shop appropriately called The Magic Needle owned by Alice McGinnis. She has been monogramming fine linens for over fifteen years and has just relocated to 19 Main Street, downtown Sayville. Custom orders are their specialty, though many items are in stock. She also provides patrons with custom window treatments and interior decorating services along with customized hand-painted furniture. The list goes on. There is also a wonderful selection of candle lamps, custom lamps, French hand-painted pottery, picture frames and many other handmade items. Give her a call at 631-218-8484.

HOME FOR THE SUMMER... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Cell Phone Fear

We all spend a little time, or a lot of time, making sure that we do things to keep ourselves healthy. Some of us try to eat fruits and vegetables. Some of us try to lay off the sweet stuff, drinking less alcohol and more water. Some of us are trying to quit smoking or already have.

No matter what it is, it is good that we are taking the time out of our busy schedules to realize that doing yoga or going for a jog might be beneficial. After all, what is the point of doing all of this hard work if we are not around to enjoy the fruits of our labor?

Most of the people I know have their little quirks to stay in shape. My Dad, for example, wakes up every morning at the crack of dawn and plays basketball outside of the house. The basketball hoop is on the garage about seven feet up. I have never taken the time to actually play a game of ball with my Dad early in the morning; usually I just sleep through it. I always wake up to it because my window faces the garage and I like to sleep with the window open. I'll wake up in the early morning terrified, thinking that I am under attack because the sound of the basketball hitting the ground sounds like machine gun fire.

The thing that I try to do to stay healthy is to eat a lot of whole grain foods and fish. I also like to go running every once in awhile on the beach. As far as my health, I feel like I have some pretty healthy habits. I don't consider beer and cigarettes a food group.

There is one habit, however, that really has me worried. It's my cell phone. I have been a regular cell phone user for the past three years now and it seems like I just keep using it more and more. I used to think nothing of using my cell phone. Every time I used it I put it in the same league as a regular phone. Nobody seems to be dying from them; a lot of people seem to be using them so everything should be fine. Right? What do I have to worry about? They're just cell phones, harmless.

I can't help but think, what if we are all wrong? What if all the doctors and scientists that studied the radiation effects of cell phones were just paid off? What if from the beginning cell phone companies knew that using a cell phone was the same as standing in front of a microwave oven watching popcorn pop?

I know what you are thinking. You are thinking I am being paranoid. You are thinking that something like that is completely ridiculous and too far fetched. But listen my dear reader, it is not all that far fetched.

Let's not forget that just fifty or so years ago, doctors were on television advocating the health benefits of smoking. Imagine that, a doctor saying that smoking is good for you. You think that he wasn't paid off by the big cigarette companies? Of course he was. The cigarette companies from the beginning were hiding information about the dangers of smoking; that it caused lung cancer, emphysema, and bad breath. They are paying for it now, but this is fifty years later. People are still lighting up, but fewer than before.

I am only suggesting this because the other day I was on my cell phone talking to one of my buddies from Boston, when suddenly a headache started to come on. My headache got worse the more I talked on the cell phone. Why do they call them cell phones anyway? This doesn't make any sense to me either.

I knew that this headache had something to do with the cell phone. I could feel the cell phone tumor growing in my brain. Fear came over me. I was so stupid. I had been talking on the cell phone at my Dad's house which has a land line that I don't even have to pay for. Yet there I was, happy about my free nights and weekend minutes that I was using.

I understand that many of us are at the point where we feel we need cell phones and can't live without them. All I'm saying is, what if? What if these cell phones are trouble? What if this whole time that cell phone users are walking down the street, cell phones are actually putting their health in jeopardy? What if it's a conspiracy or government mind control? What if aliens gave us the cell phone technology to kill us off? What if... what if... okay, you get the point.

They say that they invented those ear piece/headset things for driving. I don't believe that for a second. I think that somebody just felt guilty within the cell phone companies. I would go out right now and get one of those headsets that people use in their cars, but those are both stupid looking and they are annoying to use. I tried the earpiece once - complete disaster. I would keep the wire all wriggled up in my pocket along with the cell phone. I would fiddle with the earpiece trying to get the thingy in the hummouser and untangle the wire. By the time I had everything together the phone would stop ringing.

If somebody invented an earpiece that was connected by a spool to the cell phone, and you could ravel and unravel it easily and also make it cool looking, they would make a lot of money. I'd buy that and not think twice about it. I don't want people at my funeral whispering, "So what happened to Dave?"

"It was his cell phone that got him."

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face.....with Annette

Price of Creams/Cremes, Lotions and Potions

I had a real eye opener reading Sunday's New York Times. In the Styles section, the title of this column, "Is This Cream Worth $500" worked better than any cup of coffee I have ever had. What could they possibly have in this cream that makes it so superior than so many others on the market? Liquid gold? Crème Cellulaire Radiance is its name, produced by the Swiss company La Prairie. Made with a combination of plant-based estrogens derived from soybeans, wild yams and other natural ingredients as well as some that can't be pronounced. Amazing... but I really begin to wonder just how much of that good stuff is in there, especially when the very first ingredient on the label is water. Ingredients are listed in their order of amounts, so water is their largest. Hmmm.

Another new one being sold in Neiman Marcus is Intense Creme Lustre – a bargain at $375 an ounce compared to the previous one. Concocted by plastic surgeon from Louisville, Kentucky, he states the primary ingredient is insulin like growth factor. This plumps up the skin it is applied to and reduces the appearance of lines. This ingredient costs the company $30,000 a gram. Another ingredient in it is Metalloproteinase inhibitor, which costs $25,000 a gram... it works to block a collagen destroying enzyme. I am not going to get into the math of producing this $375 baby, but I am thinking that eventually surgery may pay off. If one is putting off facial surgery perhaps because of cost, think how expensive the alternative is.

La Prairie recently came out with a larger version of their Caviar Luxe Creme for $550. That's a whopping 3.4 ounce you get. Whew.

The prime ingredients in these products, your water, your soy and wild yams can be found in other products you can pick up at your local drugstore. Aveeno Daily Moisturizer can be purchased for under $16 and it has soy.

Before purchasing these costly cremes and creams, which also has me confused, read the labels, you may be able to find the same in other brands. And remember, when in doubt, scoot over to my friend Paula's website, www.cosmeticcop.com or pick up her book, (Don't Go to The Cosmetic Counter Without Me) she'll give you the real lowdown on making up!

On a much more realistic note, if you are thinking of laser surgery, chemical peel, or Botox, you may want to give new Olay Regenerist a shot. They say although it's not a doctor's procedure and it isn't just skin care, it's revolutionary cell care. Olay Regenerist regenerates the skin's appearance. Damaged skin has been proven to respond well to this new product. You can pick up this up wherever Olay products are sold or go on their website for a free sample, www.olay.com.

At Macy's, slide over to the Lancome counter, with your purchase of $25 or more you will get a Lancome Signature Tote with matching change purse. Includes a full size Lip Colour and Maquillage EyeColour Duo, new Resolution D-Contraxol Anti-Wrinkle Treatment for Normal/Combination Skin, Definicils mascara, Effacil Eye Makeup Remover. Such a deal!

"Yoga For Dummies"

Yoga is designed to enhance mind-body consciousness and to increase strength, flexibility, and agility. It is also designed to confuse the novice with different terms, styles, and forms. Here are some guidelines that might be helpful in identifying which type of yoga is appropriate for your needs.

Nearly all yoga styles are rooted in hatha yoga, the discipline that focuses on developing control of the body through asanas or poses. Hatha yoga comprises what most people associate with the term yoga. But there are many categories of Hatha yoga, ranging from the most restful and gentle to the most vigorous and athletic.

Ashtanga Yoga, on which the popular power yoga is based, is a high energy, highly dynamic style that demands strength and agility to handle its rigorous pace. This physically demanding yoga was developed to build strength, flexibility, and stamina. The hallmark of an Ashtanga yoga class is the continuous flow of movements (known as vinyasas). Students move from one posture to another and link their movements to breath. Ashtanga yoga stretches and strengthens the body, and generally leaves the student feeling like he or she has gotten a good workout. Bring a towel.

Bikram's Yoga is a relatively strenuous form practiced in a room heated anywhere from 85 degrees to 100 degrees. The idea behind Bikram's yoga is that heat increases the body's ability to move and stretch without injury. The class itself focuses on building lower body strength through a routine of twenty-six postures. They are held from 30, 45, to 60 seconds and are often performed twice. Bring a towel and water, you will absolutely need them both.

Iyengar Yoga is known for its great attention to detail and precise alignment of poses. Straps, blankets, wooden blocks, and chairs are often helpful in assisting the body achieve and maintain several postures. Focus is also placed on breathing to help sustain and increase the effects of these postures. Typically, instructors of Iyengar yoga complete a rigorous two to five year training program for certification.

Viniyoga Yoga is defined by its attention to the restorative aspects of flow. This kind of yoga is not so much a style as it is a methodology for developing practices for individual conditions and purposes. Postures are assigned sequence that may vary from class to class. These flowing movements are similar to Ashtanga's dynamic series of poses, but are performed at a greatly reduced pace and stress level. Breathing techniques are often included and used to enhance the therapeutic effects of the postures. Viniyoga is considered excellent for beginners.

Kripalu Yoga also focuses on slow moving postures and breathing. This style takes the student through three stages beginning with the steady practice of postures, then holding those postures longer while developing concentration and inner awareness, and finally getting to the point in which movement from one posture to another arises unconsciously and spontaneously.

There are many yoga studios and instructors throughout the East End. Depending on your own goals, physical ability, and experience with yoga, one of these types will be suitable for you.

Mortgage Strategies

The home of your dreams is within reach. You have established the value of the home, and have agreed upon a purchase price with the seller. You have consulted with your mortgage banker or broker who has informed you of the documentation required. However, there remains a problem.

You have the means to make your mortgage payments, as well as sufficient funds for the down payment and closing costs. As a recent graduate of medical school, or perhaps law school, you may be under contract for substantial pay increases over the next few months. The fact remains, however, that presently your income does not qualify you for the loan amount you need. In addition, your down payment funds may have been derived from a gift, relative or an occasion such as a wedding, which cannot be documented. Don't get discouraged. There are loan programs available to finance your dream home other than the traditional Full Income and Asset documentation mortgages.

A No Income, No Asset check mortgage is based upon a borrower's credit profile. Higher scores result in a more rapid approval and better terms. The pleasant aspect of this loan type is that you are not required to provide the laundry list of documentation normally associated with the mortgaging process. In most cases, the actual loan application has a one page format very similar to a credit card application. The only other documentation required is your contract and an appraisal for approval.

There are also different types of No Income, No Asset mortgages based on the documentation you present. Stated Income, Full Asset and No Ratio loan programs provide preferential interest rates. While they both require asset documentation and verbal employment verification, neither require W-2's, pay stubs and or tax returns. As a rule, more documentation results in a lower interest rate and better terms.

Keep this thought in mind. If within a period of a year, there is an increase in your earnings, you can modify or refinance the No Income mortgage into a Full Documentation loan with a more desirable interest rate. If you're purchasing a new home, your closing may not take place for nine to twelve months; therefore, you can initially apply for a No Income, No Asset type loan, and if your financial situation improves prior to close you can restructure your mortgage at no additional cost.

About Gardening... with Annette

Roses In The Garden -Our State Flower

I was discouraged for a long time by a well meaning neighbor about the time and trouble roses entail. I would see them all over town and somehow I had a hunch they couldn't be all that hard to take care of. They do need some care, maybe a bit more than other plants - but nonetheless - so well worth that effort. When cared for correctly, roses are a summertime garden standout. Their color, beauty and fragrance have made them a favorite throughout the ages. The adaptability of roses along with a wide selection of cultivars available makes them a perfect choice almost any landscape needs.

However, a rose that has not been properly cared for becomes nothing more than an eyesore. But, you can forget that misconception that roses require extensive maintenance. This is just not true. The performance of a rose depends on the timing of the care you give it rather than the quantity. Roses are hardy plants and they will thrive in many different locations. However there are five basics you ought to know:

Sun: Roses need at least four to six hours of direct sun daily.

Soil: Roses will grow in rich well drained soil. They will not tolerate 'wet feet'. Proper drainage is required.

Watering: Water around the base of the plant only. If you water the foliage at the wrong time, it will start your problems. If you are using a sprinkler system, water only in the early morning so weeks. This will replace nutrients which the roses have taken from the soil. Begin fertilizing after your roses are fully leafed out and stop feeding the end of August. There are many types of fertilizer you can use. It is recommended to use one that includes a systemic insecticide.

Mulching: Mulching around your roses is a critical step in promoting health. It eliminates the need to cultivate around the shrub, aids in water retention, keeps roots cool in the summer months and discourages weed growth.

That's all there is as far as general care for roses goes - choosing the right variety and color will of course come first - arbors or fences may need to be erected and that is where the back breaking work comes in.

PRUNING ROSES

Ok, so now you finally decided to get those roses you have long admired. Aside from the watering, spacing, anchoring, fertilizing, mulching and weather conditions considered, there is one more important function you must perform, and that is pruning.

And, you don't have to be a rocket scientist to do it either.

First thing you must do is learn deadheading which is so simple. Deadheading is a term given to removing the spent flower off a vine, bush, tree or that the foliage will dry out before the strong sun is out. Do not use your sprinkler system at night or the foliage will not dry out which can lead to fungus and disease.

Fertilizing: During the growing season, it is recommended to fertilize your roses every 4-6

plant. Once your rose has bloomed the flower should be removed. Roses are deadheaded in order to prompt the bush into producing more flowers. If the spent flowers are removed often, a rose bush will flower from late spring through late fall, depending on the weather. I have had roses in October!

Leaf clusters on roses usually appear in sets of three, five or seven. It is always best to deadhead by pruning a cane back to the 1/4" above the highest five leaf cluster.

Getting a little ahead of ourself here but learning ahead and you will be prepared for the fall.

End of Season Pruning: It is important to prune a rosebush in late fall or early winter after it has dropped most of its leaves. Often times, a harsh winter will kill back long canes on your roses. It is a good idea to prune them before that happens. Hybrid Tea Roses, a popular one, respond well to a late fall pruning.

Cut the oldest canes away from the bush. Older canes do not produce attractive growth. The greenest canes are the new ones. Cut those back only minimally. Cut the oldest ones all the way back to the ground. Identify any canes that cross directly over the center of your bush and cut them away. This type of cross-directional growing only weakens the shrub. Strip all remaining leaves from the bush.

Clean up: Cleaning-up is perhaps the most important step in pruning a rose. Whether you are deadheading or pruning at the end of the season, be sure to gather up all the foliage, canes and flowers you have cut and throw them away. Leaving this debris around your plant is a sure recipe for disease, insects and fungus. Dead matter harbors all three of those things and they will surely transfer to that beautiful rosebush you just pruned. That's all there is to it! Subscribe to these few rules of thumb and I can guarantee you a green one!

Beyond Entertaining: Keeping Stress at Bay

The beauty and prestige of the Hamptons makes it a popularly desired summer destination. The dignified beaches, incontestable style, and charming towns, collectively merit the formidable reputation that the Hamptons hold. Non-Hamptonites are at the mercy of those who reside in this serene paradise. While most of us are happy to open our homes to friends and family, the experience of having guests can leave us feeling exhausted and overworked. Facing the pressures of making visitors feel welcome, keeping them entertained, and cleaning up after them is enough to make any homeowner uneasy. While having the dreaded in-laws, friends, or colleagues from work over may seem intimidating, there are ways of preparing for a stress-free weekend.

Prepare upon the arrival of your guests so that you will have more time to relax and enjoy their presence. Keeping your house looking tidy can be done with out feeling as if you are a cleaning staff employee. While it is guaranteed that your guests will visit the beach, it does not mean that your house has to be left looking like one. Place two, unobtrusive plastic bins on the side entrance of your home labeled, "beach towels" and "sandy shoes" in funky, colorful lettering. Not only will this ensure that sandy belongings are kept outside, but your guests will be impressed by your creativity as well.

Prepare food ahead of time. Before your guests arrive, stock up on light snacks so that they will be satisfied all day long. Gussy up your favorite treats and leave them around the house for easy accessibility. Transfer ready-made dip into an attractive bowl and place it next to an arrangement of crudites, leave out a bowl of baked (non-greasy) potato chips, and fruit with sliced cheese. Make meals the night before and put them in the freezer. When it comes time to serve, warm up and add additional décor by using one of your finest serving platters. Add radiance to your table by providing a selection of colorful fresh juices in chilled pitchers. Also, make sure that you have a variety of food. Nothing makes a person feel more left out than not being able to eat the tasty treats that the host prepared, due to dietary constraints. By setting out a medley, everyone will find something that looks appetizing. However, the most important thing is to be flexible and easy on your self. If you do not have time to make something, purchase the item or make substitutions.

Another way of getting ready for the weekend is to make reservations far in advance. In addition to making dinner reservations, arrange for a babysitter so that none of the adults are left watching the kids on Saturday night.

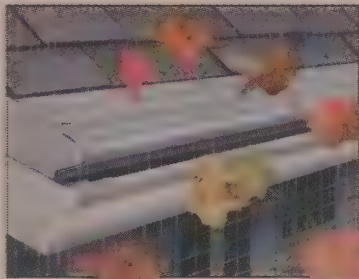

When the guests arrive, give them a brief tour of the house and show them where things go. Depending on the length of their stay, introduce them to the washing machine, the ironing board and the supplies closet. This welcoming, yet informative tour just might inspire your guests to do their own laundry, put the dishes in the dishwasher, and clean up their own spills. In addition to a few planned activities, provide your guests with recommendations of places to explore independently. These few hours alone will give you enough time for some needed rest and recuperation.

All in all, your weekend with company should be one that you enjoy. Kick back, relax and try to have fun. Chances are, your guests will have a few "good guest" tactics of their own and will do their best to make your weekend as easy as possible. After all, they appreciate your hospitality.

Present Links To A Plentiful Past

The Hamptons is a great place to get away from the fast speed of modern life. The quaint and charming character that is preserved here dates back to the early 1600's. Somehow, the Hamptons provide a unique haven, safe from blinding commercial billboards, sterile malls and deafening city clamor. Eighteenth century houses, 200 year-old lighthouses, and whale watching boats continue to operate as they reflect this old settlement's rich history. While the few historical sights that can be seen by walking through the villages may be enough to satisfy your historical curiosity, there are many ways in which one can experience the Hampton's interesting and unique past.

For the vacationer, old renovated bed and breakfasts can provide a beautiful and luxurious way of connecting to the Hampton's yesteryear. One magnificent place to stay is the Box Farm. This old, private residence dates back to the 1600's, and bestows architectural grandeur and beauty. Located in Watermill, the Box Farm is one of the few farmhouses that survived from the 1600's. Although the home has been modified over time, the house remains an excellent example of architectural style that existed in the 1700 and 1800's.

The 1708 House is another fabulous bed and breakfast that dates back to the early 1700's. Located in the heart of South Hampton, it includes a cellar that has existed since 1648. The historic cellar has a museum quality. The original brick fireplace, oak beams and stone walls are still in tact. In addition to the architectural, the Hamptons have a distinct and notable artistic history.

In the 1870s, famed landscape painter Winslow Homer and early impressionists William Merritt Chase and Childe Hassam all lived and painted here. Other acclaimed artists who have resided in the Hamptons include Max Ernst, Fernand Leger, Marcel Duchamp and James Rosenquist. Robert Motherwell, Roy Lichtenstein, Willem de Kooning, Jackson Pollock and Larry Davis.

For a further look into the art that resides in the Hamptons, The Parrish Art Museum is a great place to visit. The museum has a collection of revolutionary paintings that were completed during the turn of the century. Currently at the Parrish museum, Augustus Saint-Gauden's work is being showcased. The American artist has been acknowledged as one of the most important sculptors in the 19th century. This exhibit runs from June 8 through August 3. Other worthy exhibitions include, the late impressionist painter, William Merritt Chase. The Bayberry Bush (1895), reflects the artist's years on the East End of Long Island.

It is impossible to discuss the history of the Hamptons without paying tribute to the Shinnecock Indian tribe. While the local people of Southampton celebrated their 350th anniversary in 1990, the Shinnecock history can be traced back to the first hunters and gatherers on the island 10,000 years ago. More information about the tribe can be found at the cultural museum at Shinnecock, or Teepee in the Hills, Native American Arts and Crafts Gallery. Finally, if you are going to be around for labor day weekend, attend the annual Pow Wow to experience Native American singing, dancing, foods and crafts.

Another remarkable destination to explore in the Hamptons is the Montauk Point Lighthouse. Authorized under president George Washington, in 1792, this tower has been part of Long Islands' land and seascape ever since. This incredible structure continues to serve as an active aid to navigation. One can also visit the museum, located on 1860 Keepers House, to view a variety of documents and photographs about the tower. For visual stimulation, one can view "The Montauk Lighthouse, Sentinel of Long Island" at the lighthouse throughout the day. —Lauren Rubinstein

Sun Shines On Landscape Pleasures

On June 14 and 15, The Parrish Art Museum presented Landscape Pleasures, an annual event that focuses on the nexus of horticulture and design. Proceeds benefit the ongoing educational programs at the museum. This year's focus was on "water," an apt topic for a community that has hunkered down against one of the wettest springs on record.

The Saturday Symposium, was held in The Parrish Art Museum Concert Hall. More than 150 home gardeners and professional landscape architects gathered to hear three guest speakers discuss water as art, sculpture, architecture, and landscape design.

After a welcome by Museum Director Trudy C. Kramer, Marilyn Symmes, editor and primary author of Fountains: Splash and Spectacle, Water and Design from the Renaissance to the Present, gave an overview of the history of fountains in public and private spaces. In speaking on "Fountains: Splash, Spectacle, Reflection," Ms. Symmes showed examples ranging from the Trevi fountain in Rome, to the Apollo Fountain in Versailles, to Bethesda Fountain in New York's Central Park, to 20th Century examples from Isamu Noguchi and Lawrence Halprin.

Next, Peter Kopik, Design Director of WET Design, the California-based firm that designs water features around the world, spoke on "Water Features — Design & Development," an overview of the firm's global work, such as the spectacular fountains at the Bellagio Hotel in Las Vegas. WET Design's work — the name is an acronym for Water, Entertainment and Technology — emphasizes the sculptural and interactive aspects of water. The water features created by WET Design invite children of all ages to play in and with the water.

The third speaker was Andrew Revkin, a prize-winning journalist who writes for The New York Times. His topic was more serious: the effect of global warming on our most precious element. Revkin emphasized that human beings are now the driving force behind natural selection, but we are only at the exuberant "teenager" stage of development, reveling in our abilities but not yet ready to take an adult role and channel our abilities to be responsible "planetary gardeners." We have to transition out of fossil fuels, he said, and that will take an effort similar to the Manhattan Project or the Space Project.

After the guest speakers, landscape architect Perry Guillot and, along with Lillian Cohen, Charlotte Moss and Edwina von Gal, a co-chair of Landscape Pleasures, gave an overview of the eight private gardens on Sunday's Garden Tour. In keeping with the theme, all of the gardens had swimming pools and other water features carefully integrated within the sites.

Gardens on the self-guided tour included those of Deborah Berke and Dr. Peter McCann, Ross Bleckner, Christopher Browne, Millie and Arne Glimcher, Betsey Johnson, Sam Shahid and Michael Trokel.

Toxic Mold

Is it making you or a family member sick?

Toxic Mold can cause wheezing, coughing, difficulty breathing, nasal and sinus conditions, reddened, burning eyes, blurry vision, headaches, aches and pains and other problems.

Poor ventilation and leaks in the attic... floods or leaky pipes create a fertile environment for toxic molds. Often these microbes go unseen behind walls, under roofs, over ceilings and in the darkest spots in our basements.

For more than twenty years TechClean Industries has provided mold decontamination services for hospitals, research laboratories, pharmaceutical companies, universities and now — homes like yours.

Police Blotter

A myriad of stolen goods top the reports this week in the Hamptons. The most timely theft occurred on Main Street in East Hampton on Sunday when a man stole a bundle of The New York Times from an East Hampton grocery store. The owner of the establishment called police to report the incident and told police that he knew the man, but didn't want to press charges. In case you were wondering, a bundle of The New York Times goes for about $16.80 these days.

On the contrary, the untimely theft of $200 worth of firewood from a Marien Lane residence warranted a brief police investigation. The owner of the East Hampton home told responding officers that someone had taken the half-cord of wood and broken a $200 driveway light in the process last Saturday night. Police patrolled the neighborhood but came up empty handed.

This just in from the New York State Bureau of Common Sense: "Don't leave your vehicle unattended with the keys in the ignition."

A Water Mill resident told police that he left his four-wheeled ATV parked at a house on Rt. 114 in East Hampton, but when he returned five hours later, it was missing. If the thief is caught he or she will face charges of Grand Larceny due to the $4,000 value of the ATV. Police have no suspects at this time.

East Hampton police arrested a 19-year-old man last week after he was pulled over in a school zone for speeding at 32 miles per hour in an area marked 20. However it wasn't the 12 miles per hour that gave officers the arrest, it was the plume of smoke that erupted from the vehicle as they approached. They asked the glassy, red-eyed man to step out of the car and when he did, they saw a pipe containing what appeared to be marijuana and a small joint inside. The driver was placed under arrest and charged with driving while impaired by drugs.

Dan's Letters

CASINO CLUELESS

Dear Dan,

As a homeowner on Newtown Road in Hampton Bays, I'm just amazed at how many people, including big property owners in Southampton, Watermill, Bridgehampton, are clueless to this Casino coming. I don't get a sense that the town officials are being up front with us on what's on the table. IT IS ALSO NOT REPORTED ON ENOUGH from the town officials' points of view other than setting up a bunch of meetings/talks and nothing being reported on the outcome. It seems like what I read is reporting on the developers end and what the Indians plan to do and their hardships. What is the town doing? Are they truly exempt from any environmental laws? Can they possibly build right up to the beach? How can we be involved to stop this?

Mary Mattingly

THINK GLOBALLY, EAT LOCALLY

Dear Dan,

There is so much talk about land preservation on the East End of Long Island in the papers. In order to preserve farmland, you have to preserve the farmer. As Long Islanders, we are very blessed to live here with its beauty and fertile soil, giving us access to fresh homegrown produce in abundance. Therefore, to keep it alive, we consumers must request it, buy it, and then eat it during the growing seasons. Here is a twist to you the consumer. Buy from your local farm stand if you have one near by, but when you go into your supermarket, ask for local Long Island produce. When you go out to dinner ask if they are serving Long Island fruit, vegetables and wine.

Without the consumer, the Long Island farmer will not survive. Therefore, to preserve farmland and the Long Island farmer, demand local and enjoy fresh grown on Long Island produce.

GRAMMAR SCHMAMMER

Dear Dan,

A few weeks ago, when a grammatical error was pointed out, you said "nobody's perfect." We would still like you to be, however.

My experts say your usage of "whoever it is laying on a stretcher" is incorrect, and you should have said, "lying on a stretcher."

My method of remembering when to use "lay" or "lie", is if an object is in motion, use lay – if not in motion, use lie. Example: Please lay the book on the table, and let it lie there. For a perfect Dan's.

Howard Purcell
Amagansett

P.S. Also, shouldn't you have said "whomever"?

Whatever... —D.R.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER

Dear Dan,

I know you mean well, and we much appreciate your coming to the Vail-Leavitt to exhibit your play-writing skills, but PLEASE do not refer to Riverhead as "Central Long Island." Riverhead is as "East End" as Westhampton Beach or Hampton Bays, and we share a border with Southampton Town. Riverhead has a unique character all her own, neither Hamptons nor up-island. We are decidedly working class (that means salaried workers, like teachers, professors, cops, and restaurateurs), but we are not provincial by any standard. We are (generally) common sense people who, for the most part, live here year-round, work here, raise our children here, and are gratefully beginning to realize our potential. So, welcome to Riverhead, "The Gateway to the East End." Enjoy our shopping, our restaurants, our nightlife, our farm stands, wineries, and myriad of other attractions available to those who are looking for something a little different from the Hamptons. You may refer to us as "The Un-Hamptons," Dan, but please don't call us "Central Islanders."

Dennis J. O'Connor

COFFEE CONFESSIONS

Dear Dave,

I have been enjoying reading your Away At School column in Dan's Papers. As the co-owner of Hampton Coffee Company, based in Water Mill, I particularly enjoy your regular thoughts and musings about coffee and espresso while away at school. Each week you talk about coffee, I am secretly hoping you'll mention us, Hampton Coffee Company from your hometown of the Hamptons. You haven't, and that's O.K. Your column's focus is on your college town, not your hometown.

But, I hope you can understand my major disappointment and utter confusion after reading your June 6, column in which you write towards to the end, "Summer has come and I am back in East Hampton. I have been sticking to my no espresso guns and have three days without caffeine. Non-Starbucks espresso is hard to come by in these parts, which is helping..."

What? Are you sure you really grew up in the Hamptons? How long have you been away at school? On your way to and from Boston, don't you pass Hampton Coffee Company on the south side of Montauk Highway next to The Green Thumb Farmstand? We've been there for eight years now. Haven't you ever seen our ads in Dan's Papers or read about Hampton Coffee Company's participation in yet another charity event being sponsored by your paper? Plus, our headquarters and coffee roaster is just a few miles down the road from your paper's office. Many of the paper's staff are Hampton Coffee Company regulars. Do I need to go on?

Did you know that Hampton Coffee Company has three-espresso bar and cafés? Besides the one down the road from Dan's Papers, there is one in Westhampton Beach and one in your hometown of East Hampton, right next to the movie theater. We roast our own coffee right in Water Mill. Besides using this coffee and espresso in our cafes, we also wholesale it to dozens of top eateries from Dean & DeLuca in New York City to Ben & Jerry's in Montauk and to top Hamptons restaurants like The Farmhouse, Riccardo's, Turtle Crossing, American Bistro, Gurney's Inn and Resort also in Montauk, etc.

While I would love for you to only mention Hampton Coffee Company as the only "non-Starbucks espresso" in the Hamptons, to be fair, which YOU should have been in your column, you can also get espresso at our competitor, The Golden Pear Café.

Another point of interest since you brought up Starbucks; Hampton Coffee Company has more locations in the Hamptons than Starbucks and is Long Island's largest independent roaster-retailer! And Starbucks coffee roasting for its New York stores in actually done in Pennsylvania.

David, stop into Hampton Coffee Company some time and we'll show you the best cup of "non-Starbucks" espresso you've ever had!

Jason Belkin, CEO
Hampton Coffee Company

We'll drink to that. —D.R.

NORMA REYNOLDS REALTY

CLOVERCROFT, QUOGUE, NEW YORK

A semicircular drive flanked by privet hedges leads to this ca. 1930 traditional Hamptons clapboard surrounded by 1.13 acres of lush landscaping. The 6,000 sq. ft. residence includes elegant double parlors with fireplaces, a huge sunroom, formal dining room, a butler's pantry and country kitchen. A first floor elevator rises to the master suite with fireplace and exercise room; 3 guest rooms and 2 baths on second level; 3 additional guest rooms and 2 baths on third level. A paved patio connects the main house to the guest cottage with fireplace and hot tub. Outdoor amenities include a heated Gunite pool and 4-car garage with billiard room. Folio #14345, OUR CO-EXCLUSIVE, price upon request, shown by appointment only. Available for rental July through Labor Day.

Did You Know That With JTG Construction?

- You can enjoy a more solid home — we've always built to higher standards than the local building code calls for.
- You don't have to wait for sub-contractors. We have our own crews of men with an on-site supervisor.
- We are Design-Build Specialists. We can do all of your drawings and designs in-house whether it be a new home, an addition or renovation to your existing home including the kitchen, bathrooms, rec room, garage or solarium.
